Robert F. Kennedy Assassination Pamphlet

Joseph Kennedy Sr. was fitted into a 20th Century vest

In the combined chapters of Joseph Kennedy was fitted into a 20th Century vest and the chapter The Special Relationship and the Birth of Treason in my book The Great Treason I show have the amazing history of Joseph Kennedy Sr and his closeness during war time of the 20th Century turned into the post WWII Cold War nightmare of his family caught in between the hard place of illegal British actions and the rock of support for US and its methods and laws. Eventually those< in the USA seemed to have killed JFK and RFK and while British plans were in place around the world and US it is not clear Great Britain itself was part of the action of assassinating JFK but was likely at least reticent on available facts. Most signs point to the oil industry in the USA.

In WW I while fulfilling ship order for Navy Undersecretary Franklin Deleanour Roosevelt JK Sr. was a wheeler dealer and got jobs done including some favors for some elite families around the world. In WW II he changed from war at sea to war in the air and helped create the P-51 fleet with British Marlin engines made by Packard Motors under British license.

So What if th Boston Brahim and Elites had a Deep State that assassinated JFK and took power? Is it Skyfall now for those who gained power?

Skyfall. When the Sky falls down on the 00's around the world.

Union Jack Draped Coffins as a list of the secret agents around the world is being revealed and attacks are occuring. Fans suggest these 8 caskkets are 001 through 006 and 008 and 009. Bond was not on duty during the attack.

Actual place and location: Old Royal Naval College, King William Undercroft, College Way, Greenwich, London, England. What happens here in the movie: M (Judi Dench) stands next to the coffins of the agents that died in the explosion of the MI6 building. https://www.007travelers.com/filming-location/m-next-to-the-coffins-of-mi6-agents-skyfall-2012/

"I think those contain the bodies of 001, 002, 003, 004, 005, 006, 008, and 009. Of couse, 007 is alive and well!" That sounds like it 00Jonathan

In Great Brittain these are the subversion and overthrow experts of British Naval Commanders like James Bond. In the USA though are these caskets the patriots Ted Gunderson, Jen Moore, and others who assert a large Elites conspiracy revolving around Allen Dulles that killed JFK and RFK and others? I think so and Jen Moore expressed that before her death.

The Stages of Joseph Kennedy Sr.'s life and ties to Great Britain and Its Methods of Subversion He Later Tried To Break Free From

This book will assert the following flow of events. Kennedy Sr. was an insider trader and favor trader with high ranking officials of the US and Great Britain doing deals that seemed ok at the time. Later he found himself in bed with dangerous people and tried to break free clearing the path for JFK to run for President of the USA without any baggage from JFK Sr.'s life. The trouble was a key resource was needed from Joseph Kennedy Sr.'s life, an agreement he made to get pregnant Maria Kutchera with Windsor family father into the USA and hid them under secret identies inside the USA to keep them away from Nazis that Captain Von Trapp was being forced into from 1926 on in Austria by Franz Kutschera. These hidden identy children were wanted by the CIA (formerly OSS) for study and possible grooming for world sleeper agents the Mafia would back around the world. One was Marilyn Monroe the other was Glorian Gainey.

Why would the WASPs Brahim elites call the fairly famous Joseph Kennedy Sr for help in 1926? Because Maria Kutschera was pregnant in a Vatican controlled Catholic convent and Catholic help in the USA was needed from a wheeler-dealer like Joseph Kennedy Sr.

While the Mafia would call him a criminal to bring him down to the level of themselves he was what Bill Wilson of AA was at about the same time, an insider information profiteer.

In fact in WWII Propoganda and Psychological Warfare (that include assasinations of political figures feared by the opposition) were a norm in war, or at least becoming so and fairly intuitive. Make the other person look bad to the public, etc., But I think the phase of during war and against Adolph Hitler was an acceptable cause for Jospeh Kennedy Sr. After the war ended England and the USA doing it to sovereign nations including Ireland was offensive.

Dorothy Kilgallen was caught in between Jospeh Kennedy Sr. Post WWI WWII and the Cold War Joseph Kennedy Sr. renouncing diry war

Dorothy Mae Kilgallen who interviewed Jack Ruby before he died was (along with her close friend RFK) anti-Mafia and she was a Roman Catholic AND from (at least her father) Hearst Newspapers. She KNEW THE VON TRAPP Singers story and toured with them. She knew how they got to the USA in 1936 and I think even Maria Von Trapp giving birth in the USA in 1926. She was close to the Whitehouse of JFK and its nursery and the personal lives of them all. I think it was this Von Trapp story as it related to Indonesia and the plans for it that involved the favor Joseph Kennedy Sr did in the earlier 20th Century that she was putting all together. Not only did she tour with the Sound of Music movie she was on Celebrity Squares sith the singers.

Lee Harvey Oswald in the Dallas Jail talked about the Nazis he discovered (Kutschera's) in the USA and tried to call North Carolina

He too realized this was the story line JFK was really assassinated over and was trying to gather those willing to talk.

In 1936 Festus Gainey died, the adoptive father of Glorian Gainey and soon King Edward VIII would resign to become Duke Edward leading the fight in France against the Nazis. Following that and continuing as a Royal Peer he would be the Lord Governor of the Island of Burmada and work with the USA to fight communism in Latin America and the Caribbean. the Bermuda Dunes airport and the El Mirrador (overlook of Guatamla) were suspiciously named hints to the Duke's activities and Princess Elizabeth work with the USA as she became in earlly 1952 Queen Elizabeth II whom Kennedy Sr. respected and new well.

King Edward VIII abdicated the British throne on December 11, 1936, to marry Wallis Simpson, an American divorcée.

In an article a picture of Joseph P. Kennedy Sr. (1888 – 1969, second from right), the new U.S. Ambassador to the United Kingdom, leaves the US Embassy to present his credentials to the King at Buckingham Palace, London, 8th March 1938. He is accompanied by Sir Sidney Clive (1874 – 1959, third from right), Marshal of the Diplomatic Corps. (Photo by Becker/Fox Photos/Hulton Archive/Getty Images)

He respected her and new her well (and her him) because like Duke Edward Joseph Kennedy Sr did not leave Great Britain in disgrace, it as just made to look that way. Seeing England was near defeat as the rest of Europe had fallen he returned to the USA to with FDR start a secret and semi-secret role of the USA helping England when nuetrality was in place. Using his busines ties again he worked wtih Packard Motors of Detroit to build the Merlin two stage supercharged Spitfire engine and fit it into the North American Aviation P-51 of Inglewood California.

The CIA and British did not play fair. THey used assassinations, Mafia, propaganda of planted false information, cover intervention into the wars of other countries hiding the US role and miliary resources cotributed to those wars, etc.,

In the 1950's as the Kennedy family tried to stop the Mafia Joseph Kennedy Sr. was being threatend by the Mafia and hit was put out on him. It was cancelled by order from Sam Giacana but he expected the Kennedy Family after that would be hands-off to the Mafia the CIA was using as a resource. It was by Giancana's perspective "mixed messaging" from J. Edgar Hoover and others. In public they were going after the Mafia yet in private the were asking the Mafia for help.

Bringing the Irish Roman Catholics into the British subverions plans were doomed to fail and the Troubses in Ulster province only made things worse and the Kennedy Family resented England.

Joseph Patrick Kennedy Sr. was born on September 6, 1888, at 151 Meridian Street in East Boston, Massachusetts. Kennedy was the elder son of Mary Augusta (née Hickey) Kennedy and businessman and politician Patrick Joseph "P.J." Kennedy. Kennedy attended Boston Latin School, where he excelled at baseball and was elected class president before graduating in 1908.

Kennedy then attended Harvard College, where he gained admittance to the prestigious Hasty Pudding Club but was not invited to join the Porcellian Club. Kennedy graduated in 1912 with a bachelor's degree in economics.

Business career

Kennedy set his future sights on embarking on a business career upon his graduation from Harvard. During his mid to late 20s, he made a large fortune as an active commodity and stock investor; he then reinvested much of his proceeds into film studios, real estate, and shipping lines. Although Kennedy never built a significant business from scratch, his timing as both buyer and seller was excellent.

Various criminals, such as Frank Costello, have boasted they worked with Kennedy in mysterious bootlegging operations during Prohibition. Although his father was in the whisky importation business, scholars dismiss the claims. The most recent and most thorough biographer David Nasaw asserts that no credible evidence has been found to link Kennedy to bootlegging activities. When Fortune magazine published its first list of the richest people in the United States in 1957, it placed Kennedy in the $200–400 million group, which is equivalent to roughly 3.2 billion dollars in 2023.

Early ventures

Kennedy's first job after graduating from Harvard was a position as a state-employed bank examiner, where the job allowed him to learn a great deal about the banking industry. In 1913, the Columbia Trust Bank, in which his father held a significant share, was under threat of takeover. Kennedy borrowed $45,000 (equivalent to $1.4 million in 2023) from family and friends and bought back control. At the age of 25, he was rewarded by being elected the bank's president. Kennedy told the press he was "the youngest" bank president in America. In May 1917, Kennedy was elected to the Board of Trustees of the Massachusetts Electric Company, New England's leading public utility at the time.

Kennedy emerged as an astute businessman who possessed an eye for value, both with regard to his shrewd entrepreneurial acumen and savvy investment foresight. For example, as an active real estate investor, he turned a handsome profit from his privately-controlled ownership of Old Colony Realty Associates, Inc., an investment company which bought distressed real estate throughout the United States.

Although he was skeptical of American involvement in World War I, Kennedy sought to participate in wartime production as an assistant general manager of Fore River, a major Bethlehem Steel shipyard in Quincy, Massachusetts. There, he oversaw the production of transports and warships. Through this job, he became acquainted with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Wall Street and stock market investments

In 1919, Kennedy joined Hayden, Stone & Co., a prominent stock brokerage firm with offices in Boston and New York, where he became an expert dealing in the unregulated stock market of the day, engaging in tactics that were later considered to be insider trading and market manipulation violations. He happened to be on the corner of Wall and Broad Streets at the moment of the Wall Street bombing on September 16, 1920, and was thrown to the ground by the force of the blast. In 1923, he established his own investment company. Kennedy subsequently became a multi-millionaire as a result of taking "short" positions following the 1929 stock market crash.

Kennedy was enlisted in 1924 to help stabilize the stock of John D. Hertz's Yellow Cab Company, a taxi cab operator, against a bear raid; afterward, Hertz suspected Kennedy of carrying out such a raid against the stock himself. In 1933, he helped establish a "stock pool" that bought large quantities of stock in Libbey-Owens-Ford (LOF), an auto-glass manufacturer, and wash-traded huge volumes of stock among themselves while promoting the outright fraud that their company was related to Owens-Illinois, a glassmaker that made bottles which presumably would have profited from the imminent repeal of Prohibition.

1929 Wall Street Crash

Kennedy later claimed he understood that the rampant stock speculation of the late 1920s would lead to a market crash. It is said that he knew it was time to get out of the market when he received stock tips from a shoe-shine boy, but no evidence has been found of the anecdote and the first known version of the same tale was associated to Bernard Baruch in 1957. Kennedy survived the crash "because he possessed a passion for facts, a complete lack of sentiment and a marvelous sense of timing".

During the Great Depression, Kennedy shrewdly increased his wealth by devoting most of it into investment-grade real estate. In 1929, Kennedy's fortune was estimated to be $4 million (equivalent to $71 million in 2023). By 1935, his wealth had increased to $180 million (equivalent to $4 billion in 2023). He also acquired enough capital to establish million-dollar trust funds for each of his nine children that guaranteed lifelong financial independence.

Investments

Hollywood

Kennedy generated windfall profits from reorganizing and refinancing several Hollywood film studios. He began with film distribution in New England, buying first movie theaters in Massachusetts, but quickly moved on to industry-wide arrangements and production. While still at Hayden, Stone & Co., Kennedy boasted to a colleague, "Look at that bunch of pants pressers in Hollywood making themselves millionaires. I could take the whole business away from them." One small studio, Film Booking Offices of America (or FBO), specialized in Westerns produced cheaply. Its owner was in financial trouble, and asked Kennedy to help find a new owner. Kennedy formed his own group of investors and bought it for $1.5 million.

In March 1926, Kennedy moved to Hollywood to focus on running film studios. At that time, film studios were permitted to own exhibition companies, which were necessary to get their films on local screens. With that in mind, he bought controlling shares in Keith-Albee-Orpheum Theaters Corporation (KAO), which had more than 700 vaudeville theaters across the United States that had begun showing movies. In October 1928, he formally merged his film companies FBO and KAO to form Radio-Keith-Orpheum (RKO) and made a large amount of money in the process. Kennedy had no interest in vaudeville; he just wanted the theaters, which he planned to convert to movie houses for the film booking interests he ran in cooperation with Radio Corporation of America (RCA). As the developer of photophone, a sound system for the new "talkies", RCA needed to forge a connection with Hollywood to sell its product. At the same time Kennedy knew that he needed to compete in the new market of sound films and to do so he would have to have access to a technology that was not proprietary.

Keen to buy the Pantages Theatre chain, which had 63 profitable theaters, Kennedy made an offer of $8 million (equivalent to $142 million in 2023). It was declined. He then stopped distributing his movies to Pantages. Still, Alexander Pantages declined to sell. However, when Pantages was later charged and tried for rape, his reputation took a battering, and he accepted Kennedy's revised offer of $3.5 million (equivalent to $62.1 million in 2023). Pantages, who claimed that Kennedy had "set him up", was later found not guilty at a second trial. The girl who had accused Pantages of rape, Eunice Pringle, confessed on her deathbed that Kennedy was the mastermind of the plot to frame Pantages.

Many estimate that Kennedy made over $5 million (equivalent to $88.7 million in 2023) from his investments in Hollywood. During his three-year affair with film star Gloria Swanson, he arranged the financing for her films The Love of Sunya (1927) and the ill-fated Queen Kelly (1928). The duo also used Hollywood's famous "body sculptor", masseuse Sylvia of Hollywood. Their relationship ended when Swanson discovered that an expensive gift from Kennedy had actually been charged to her account.

Liquor importing

As soon as it became legal to do so, Kennedy ventured into liquor importing. One of his shipping ventures he was involved in was the importation of large shipments of high-priced Scotch where he earned a handsome profit in the process. Various contradictory "bootlegging" stories surrounding Kennedy have circulated but historians have not accepted them. At the start of the Franklin Roosevelt administration in March 1933, Kennedy and future Congressman James Roosevelt II founded Somerset Importers, a business entity that acted as the exclusive American agent for Haig & Haig Scotch, Gordon's Dry Gin and Dewar's Scotch. Kennedy kept his Somerset company for years. In addition, Kennedy purchased spirits-importation rights from Schenley Industries, a Canadian distillery and liquor company. Though he possessed substantial investments in various shipping lines that imported significant shipments of liquor, Kennedy himself drank little alcohol. He so disapproved of what he considered a stereotypical Irish vice that he offered his sons $1,000 not to drink until they turned 21.

Memories of WWI FDR and being born in the USA

Monroe sang the traditional "Happy Birthday to You" lyrics in a sultry, intimate voice, with "Mr. President" inserted as Kennedy's name. She continued the song with a snippet from the classic 1938 song, "Thanks for the Memory", for which she had written new lyrics specifically aimed at Kennedy.

Thanks, Mr. President For all the things you've done The battles that you've won The way you deal with U.S. Steel And our problems by the ton We thank you so much -Wikipeda

Were the lyrics targeted to FDR and Joseph Kennedy Sr., who in WWII got Marilyn Monroe and others into the USA?

Upon his appointment to the Court of St. James's [Great Britain by FDR as a loyal adjunct to FDR since WWI], Joe Kennedy was flung into a world on the brink of war, a conflict that he opposed and out of which he tried desperately to keep the United States. During his tumultuous time in London,

Joseph Kennedy fought bitterly with the State Department, as well as FDR, in his outspoken opposition to the president's policy of coming to the aid of Britain in the wake of Adolf Hitler's European onslaught.

Kennedy ruffled feathers in Washington when he met secretly with German diplomats and made few friends with his anti-Semitic remarks. In the end, his opposition to America's anti-Nazi policies led to his resignation in disgrace from his coveted ambassadorship and, for all intents and purposes, ended whatever political career he harbored for himself. https://warfarehistorynetwork.com/article/joseph-p-kennedy-most-controversial-ambassador-to-great-britain/

That is how the story goes in most tellings. But when Kennedy Sr saw the defeat of England coming he rushed to Los Angeles and got the deals made for Packard Motors to build on a mass scale basis the supercharged piston engine that would change the course of WWII.

Twice the Kennedy Men will call on Unions to win the war. In WWI Joseph Kennedy Sr and FDR asks Labor and Management to put aside their differences on behalf of he War Effort and a second time to supply the Great Brittian with Rolls-Royce Merlin V16 engines that United Autoworkers and Packard Motors could build. (Paul Schrade)

Pessimistic that Great Britain will fall to the Nazis as bombing raids threaten Great Britain he expresses his pessimism and support for Lend-Lease, us support to the Great Britain while the USA stays out of the war. It is during this time the deal starts to use the Rolls Royce engine in US fighters offering military aid to England in the same way the Republic of Ireland was doing though the Republic of Ireland was also officially neutral.

The attack on Pearl Harbor was a surprise military strike by the Imperial Japanese Navy Air Service upon the United States against the American naval base at Pearl Harbor in Honolulu, Hawaii, just before 8:00 a.m. on Sunday, December 7, 1941. Wikipedia

Part of what emerged from Scheffiled AFB was the Strategic Air Force Command with large ground based radar installations monitory the globe and conveying the tactical instructions to airborne aircraft including giving them early warning to get airborne. This later would become the Strategic Air Command burried deep in the Cheyene Mountains.

Sheffield Blitz [An Englihs version of Pearl Harbor] research guide The main attacks on Sheffield took place on the nights of 12/13 and 15/16 December 1940. On 12 December, over 330 German aircraft are believed to have attacked the city. The main industrial part of the city was largely defended that night by a covering of fog. However, the Moor was devastated and every building in Angel Street (where Argos is now) was bombed or fire damaged.

Two nights later, the bombers returned. This time the industrial east of the city was hit - Attercliffe, Grimesthorpe and Burngreave in particular. Brown Bayleys steelworks were hit, as were Hadfield's Hecla and East Hecla Works, Arthur Lee and other industrial sites.

Almost 700 people were killed during the air raids. Over 82,000 houses of a total stock of 150,000 were damaged. A number of well known buildings were also badly damaged or destroyed.

USS Joseph P. Kennedy Jr retrieved from Wikipedia and copied or modified to here

USS Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. was built by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's Fore River Shipyard at Quincy, Massachusetts, launched on 26 July 1945, sponsored by Miss Jean Kennedy, sister of Lieutenant Kennedy. Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. was commissioned at Boston on 15 December 1945.

Six weeks before his 18th birthday in 1943, Robert F Kennedy enlisted in the United States Naval Reserve as a seaman apprentice.[34] He was released from active duty in March 1944, when he left Milton Academy early to report to the V-12 Navy College Training Program at Harvard College in Cambridge, Massachusetts from March to November 1944. He was relocated to Bates College in Lewiston, Maine from November 1944 to June 1945,[35] where he received a specialized V-12-degree along with 15 others.[36] During the college's winter carnival, Robert built a snow replica of a Navy boat.[37][38] He returned to Harvard in June 1945, completing his post-training requirements in January 1946.[39]

Kennedy's oldest brother Joseph Jr. died in August 1944,[40] when his bomber exploded during a volunteer mission known as Operation Aphrodite. Robert was most affected by his father's reaction to his eldest son's passing. He appeared completely heartbroken, and his peer Fred Garfield commented that Kennedy developed depression and questioned his faith for a short time. After his brother's death, Robert gained more attention, moving higher up the family patriarchy.[41] On December 15, 1945, the U.S. Navy commissioned the destroyer USS Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., and shortly thereafter granted Kennedy's request to be released from naval-officer training to serve aboard Kennedy starting on February 1, 1946, as a seaman apprentice on the ship's shakedown cruise in the Caribbean.[39][42] On May 30, 1946, he received his honorable discharge from the Navy.[43] For his service in the Navy, Kennedy was eligible for the American Campaign Medal and the World War II Victory Medal.

USS Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. (DD-850) is a former United States Navy Gearing-class destroyer. The ship was named after Lieutenant Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., a naval aviator, son of the former U.S. Ambassador to Britain, Joseph P. Kennedy Sr., and older brother of future President John F. Kennedy. Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. served, with interruptions for modernization, until 1973. Among the highlights of her service are the blockade of Cuba during the Cuban Missile Crisis and the afloat recovery teams for Gemini 6 and Gemini 7. Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. is on display as a museum ship in Battleship Cove, Fall River, Massachusetts. She was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1976, and designated a National Historic Landmark in 1989 as one of a small number of surviving Gearing-class destroyers.

Toward the end of 1940, with Nazi troops occupying Poland, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, and France, and German bombs falling on London and other British cities, the Axis war machine looked formidable.

In the Boston Sunday Globe of November 10, 1940, Ambassador Joe Kennedy shared his opinion: "Democracy is finished in England. It may be here." His controversial views would make national news - and permanently damage his hopes for elected office.

Ed Donegan asserts the comment out of context is misinerpreted

[Does Jospeph Kennedy Sr worry about another military industrial complex forming of epionage and deep state in the USA as a war machine? And does he worry if the USA does NOT enter and peace faisl the USA will then fall too?

If We Get In, Democracy Ends

“People call me a pessimist. I say, 'What is there to be gay about? Democracy is all done.’”

“You mean in England or this country, too?”

“Well, I don’t know. If we get into war it will be in this country, too. A bureaucracy would take over right off. Everything we hold dear would be gone. They tell me that after 1918 we got it all back again. But this is different. There’s a different patter in the world.

“What about British democracy?” Edmondson asked. “Is there real opportunity there or does the aristocracy keep a rigid class structure that keeps the common man down?”

“When there’s a strong upsurge from beneath you can’t stop it,” Kennedy replies. “You can’t blame the aristocracy for keeping it down if it doesn’t come up.”

“Well, what does it mean to have labor men now at the center of government?” I ask.

National Socialism for England “It means national socialism is coming out of it,” says Kennedy flatly.

[The]Queen [Mother (during WWII] Called Great Woman

Now I tell you when this thing is finally settled, “ Joseph Kennedy Sr. declared, “ and it comes to a question of saving what’s left for England, it will be the Queen and not any of the politicians who will do it. She’s got more brains than the Cabinet.

“It’s partly because she wasn’t born into the Royal Family. Her background is of the people. She’s an omnivorous reader. Daladier told me, after he’d first met her, that she knew more about French history than almost any Frenchman.”

Born into a family of British nobility, Elizabeth came to prominence in 1923 when she married Prince Albert, Duke of York, the second son of King George V and Queen Mary. DESPATCH.

(Reference.)

NAVY DEPARTMENT,

Assistant Secretary's Office

(Bureau or office.)

WASHINGTON.

November 3, 1917., 191

OFFICIAL

(Class of message.)

J. W. Powell, President,
Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation,
Quincy, Massachusetts.

The Navy Department deplores the unfortunate misunderstanding which has arisen between the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation and its employes and desires to urge both the company and its men to arrive at the earliest possible moment at some understanding which will permit of the immediate resumption of work pending a satisfactory final settlement of the matters at issue. There is probably no one plant in the country whose continuous operation is more important to the success of this country in the war than that at Fore River. As a patriotic duty the Department urges both sides to sink all minor differences and to get together for the sake of the success of our country in this war at once. The Department further desires to offer this suggestion that, inasmuch as the rates now in force at the Boston Navy Yard have been carefully revised and are believed to represent a fair and proper scale of wages, acceptable to labor as well as to the Government, this scale be accepted in its entirety by both the Fore River Company and its men as a proper rate, and that any questions involving the details of the putting of these rates into force, not only in the letter but in the spirit in which they are in force at the Boston Navy Yard, be left to the Director of the Public Safety Commission of Massachusetts as an arbiter to determine. If this settlement is agreeable to both sides, it will meet with the Department's full and unqualified approval. This of course involves the immediate return to work of the men pending the final decisions of the arbiter as to details.

The ties between the Roosevelt and Kennedy families go back to World War I when Franklin D. Roosevelt was Assistant Secretary of the Navy. In November 1917, Joseph P. Kennedy was the Assistant General Manager of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation in Quincy, Massachusetts, when a labor strike threatened the company's contribution to the Navy's shipbuilding program. Assistant Secretary Roosevelt appealed to Fore River's management and to the striking workers "to sink all minor differences and to get together for the sake of the success of our country in this war at once." The strike ended a few days later.

As New York Governor Franklin Roosevelt prepared to seek the Democratic Party's nomination for president at the convention in Chicago in July 1932, Joseph P. Kennedy - now working in Hollywood and New York - lent his support to FDR, both financially and politically.

Kennedy was one of those who were known as "WRBC", or With Roosevelt Before Chicago. He donated to the campaign, met with Governor Roosevelt and his Brains Trust in Albany, and helped convince supporters of John Nance Garner to throw their delegates to Roosevelt at the convention. Kennedy continued to advise Roosevelt after he won the nomination, and in August Kennedy wrote to FDR: "As I told you over the phone unless they [the Republicans] can put two and one half million men back to work and get wheat up to twenty or twenty five cents a bushel the result will be overwhelming for Roosevelt." Roosevelt even invited Kennedy along on the campaign train that fall.

The Roosevelt Campaign Train, September 23, 1932. Joseph Kennedy is in front row, fifth from the right with hand in pocket.

As the New Deal began to take shape, one of FDR's early reforms was the creation of the Securities and Exchange Commission. The SEC was designed to protect investors from fraudulent and unethical practices in the stock market. FDR began to assemble his choices for the five-person Commission, and Joseph Kennedy was selected to be the first chairman.

As a June 15, 1934 memorandum indicates, FDR's choice of Kennedy as chairman reflected the man's "executive ability, knowledge of habits and customs of business to be regulated and ability to moderate different points of view …" Kennedy received a five year appointment, and although he resigned in September 1935 to return to private business, he received high praise for effectively working with both Washington and Wall Street to implement the new regulations.

Kennedy again supported FDR's nomination for the presidency in 1936, and in 1937 returned to public service to become the first chairman of the newly created Maritime Commission that had been established to revitalize the United States shipping industry.

Then, in March 1938, Kennedy received the appointment he most wanted in Roosevelt's government: Ambassador to the Court of St. James - the first Irish Catholic American to hold this prestigious diplomatic post. As the new U.S. Ambassador in London, Kennedy had a front row seat to the worsening international crisis in Europe. When war finally came in September 1939, Kennedy's public support for American neutrality conflicted with Roosevelt's increasing efforts to provide aid to Britain. Roosevelt and Kennedy met in October 1940 to try to iron out their differences, but it was clear the split could not be repaired. Kennedy resigned after FDR's election to a Third Term in November.

Despite their later policy differences, the ties between FDR and Joseph Kennedy extended to the next generation of Kennedys. In 1935, FDR learned that young Bobby Kennedy was a stamp collector and sent the boy some of stamps for his collection. In 1940, recent Harvard graduate John F. Kennedy sent an inscribed first edition of his recently published book, Why England Slept, to FDR for his book collection. As was his custom, FDR signed the flyleaf underneath Jack Kennedy's signature. And in 1944, FDR was shocked to learn of the death of Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr., while on a combat bombing mission, and the President wrote a heartfelt condolence letter to the elder Joe Kennedy.

FDR's own death in April 1945 brought an end to Joseph Kennedy's years of collaboration with Franklin Roosevelt. But post-war America saw the rise of a new Kennedy to prominence, John F. Kennedy. As a leading figure in the Democratic Party, Eleanor Roosevelt saw JFK grow from a Congressman, to a United States Senator, then a potential nominee for vice president in 1956, and finally the Democratic Party's nominee for president in 1960.

John F. Kennedy touring the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library during his visit for the 25th Anniversary of Social Security, August 14, 1960.

A longtime supporter of the liberal Adlai Stevenson's runs for the presidency, Eleanor Roosevelt had concerns about JFK's commitment to some of the liberal causes that she held dear. During the 1950s, ER challenged John Kennedy to be more vocal in his opposition to McCarthyism. And in 1960, Mrs. Roosevelt feared that JFK's caution on civil rights issues was an attempt to garner votes in the more conservative southern states that might backfire and cost him votes in the more liberal north.

On August 14, 1960, Kennedy came to Hyde Park to pay his respects to Mrs. Roosevelt and to gain her full support for his candidacy. After visiting the Roosevelt Library and the FDR Home to deliver a speech commemorating the 25th anniversary of Social Security, JFK had tea with Mrs. Roosevelt at her Val-Kill home where they talked over the issues and his campaign. Following the meeting, Eleanor Roosevelt threw her full support behind the Kennedy-Johnson ticket.

Great Britain will never forget these cadets.

In the Cold War again England and its facilities like Bermuda that helped USA and Great Brittian around the world overthrow countries like Guatamala.

In reading all this spy stuff it seems State Department officials are usually mostly aware of CIA activities the Station Chiefs in those areas are conducting but that system broke down under JFK who did not want to comply with JFK's policies.

According to Wayne Madsen who cites CIA documents the Jospeh Kennedy Jr Foundation was part of CIA funding of a plan to groom Barrack Obama for Indonesia in a plan that utalized USIAD, the Peace Corp, and East-West Foundation in Hawaii among others.

As Jospeh Kenney Sr remained the close-knot family confidant of Senator John F. Kennedy, Senator Ted Kennedy, and President John F. Patrick Joseph Kennedy (January 14, 1858 - May 18, 1929) was an American businessman and politician from Boston, Massachusetts. He and his wife Mary were the parents of four children, including future U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Chair and U.S. Ambassador to the United Kingdom Joseph P. Kennedy Sr. Their grandchildren through Joseph include U.S. President John F. Kennedy, U.S. Attorney General and U.S. Senator Robert F. Kennedy, and longtime U.S. Senator Ted Kennedy.

After cholera killed his father and brother, Kennedy was the only surviving male in his family. He started work at age fourteen and became a successful businessman, later owning three saloons and a whisky import house. Eventually, he had major interests in coal and banking as well. Kennedy was a major figure in the Democratic Party in Boston. Though he served in both the Massachusetts House of Representatives and the state Senate, he preferred to play a behind-the-scenes role as a party boss.

Early life

Patrick Joseph Kennedy was born on January 14, 1858, in Boston, Massachusetts. He was the youngest of five children born to Patrick Kennedy (1823-1858) and Bridget Kennedy (née Murphy) (1824-1888). His parents were Irish Catholic immigrants who were both from New Ross, County Wexford and emigrated together to America to flee the Great Famine in Ireland. The couple's elder son John had died of cholera in infancy two years before Kennedy was born. Ten months after P.J. Kennedy's birth, his father Patrick also succumbed to the infectious epidemic that infested the family's East Boston neighborhood. As the only surviving male, Kennedy was the first family member to receive a formal education, attending Sacred Heart, a private Catholic school in Boston. His mother Bridget had purchased an East Boston stationery and notions store where she had worked. The business took off and expanded into a grocery and liquor store.

At the age of fourteen, young Kennedy left school to help support his mother and three older sisters, Mary, Joanna, and Margaret, as a stevedore on the Boston docks. In the 1880s, with money he had saved from his modest earnings and help from his mother Bridget, he launched a business career by buying a saloon in the Haymarket Square neighborhood near downtown Boston. In time, he bought a second establishment by the East Boston docks. Next, to capitalize on the social drinking of upper-class Bostonians, Kennedy purchased a third bar in an upscale East Boston hotel, the Maverick House. Before he was 30, his growing prosperity allowed him to buy a whiskey-importing business.

Marriage and children

On November 23, 1887, Kennedy married Mary Augusta Hickey. The couple had four children and remained married until Hickey's death on May 6, 1923. His wealth afforded them a home on Jeffries Point in East Boston.

Political career

Kennedy was "always ready to help less fortunate fellow Irishmen with a little cash and some sensible advice." A sociable man able to mix comfortably with both the Roman Catholic and the Protestant elite, Kennedy moved successfully into politics. Beginning in 1884, he converted his popularity into service as a Democrat, a minority in the then Republican dominant power in the Massachusetts General Court. He served five consecutive one-year terms in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, followed by three two-year terms in the upper chamber in the Massachusetts Senate. Establishing himself as one of Boston's principal Democratic leaders, he gave one of the seconding speeches for incumbent President Grover Cleveland at the party's 1888 national convention of the party in St. Louis. However, he found campaigning, speech making, and legislative maneuvering, to be less appealing than the behind-the-scenes machinations that characterized so much of Boston politics in the late-nineteenth and early-twentieth centuries. After leaving the Senate and the General Court after many terms in 1895, Kennedy spent the rest of his political career as an appointed elections commissioner, an appointed city fire commissioner, as the backroom boss of Boston's Ward Two, and as a member of his party's unofficial Board of Strategy.

Death

By the time of his death in 1929, Kennedy held an interest in a coal company and a substantial amount of stock in a bank, the Columbia Trust Company.

In his later years, Kennedy developed degenerative liver disease. In April 1929, he was admitted to Deaconess Hospital to receive treatment. He died there on May 18 at the age of 71. His funeral was held at St. John the Evangelist Church in Winthrop, Massachusetts, on May 21. The Boston Globe reported that hundreds of mourners lined the streets to watch Kennedy's funeral procession and businesses in East Boston closed to honor him. Kennedy is buried in Holy Cross Cemetery in Malden, Massachusetts.

Legacy

In 1914, P.J. Kennedy's son Joseph married Rose Fitzgerald (July 22, 1890 - January 22, 1995), the eldest daughter of Boston Mayor John F. Fitzgerald (1863-1950). Joseph P. Kennedy Sr. went on to become a U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Chair and a U.S. Ambassador to the United Kingdom.

Joseph and Rose Kennedy had nine children, including World War II casualty Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., U.S. President John F. Kennedy, U.S. Attorney General and U.S. Senator Robert F. Kennedy, and U.S. Senator Ted Kennedy.

The Story of Obama: All in The Company (Part I)

by Wayne Madsen

In 1967, Obama and his mother joined her husband in Jakarta. In 1965, Lolo Soetoro had been called back from Hawaii by General Suharto to serve as an officer in the Indonesian military to help launch a bloody CIA-backed genocide of Indonesian Communists and Indonesian Chinese throughout the expansive country. Suharto consolidated his power in 1966, the same year that Barack Obama, Sr.'s friend, Mboya, had helped to rally pro-U.S. pan-African support for the CIA's overthrow of Nkrumah in Ghana in 1966.

President Obama's own work in 1983 for Business International Corporation, a CIA front that conducted seminars with the world's most powerful leaders and used journalists as agents abroad, dovetails with CIA espionage activities conducted by his mother, Stanley Ann Dunham in 1960s post-coup Indonesia on behalf of a number of CIA front operations, including the East-West Center at the University of Hawaii, the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), and the Ford Foundation. Dunham met and married Lolo Soetoro, Obama's stepfather, at the East-West Center in 1965. Soetoro was recalled to Indonesia in 1965 to serve as a senior army officer and assist General Suharto and the CIA in the bloody overthrow of President Sukarno.

Barack Obama, Sr., who met Dunham in 1959 in a Russian language class at the University of Hawaii, had been part of what was described as an airlift of 280 East African students to the United States to attend various colleges - merely "aided" by a grant from the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation, according to a September 12, 1960, Reuters report from London. The airlift was a CIA operation to train and indoctrinate future agents of influence in Africa, which was becoming a battleground between the United States and the Soviet Union and China for influence among newly-independent and soon-to-be independent countries on the continent.

The airlift was condemned by the deputy leader of the opposition Kenyan African Democratic Union (KADU) as favoring certain tribes - the majority Kikuyus and minority Luos - over other tribes to favor the Kenyan African National Union (KANU), whose leader was Tom Mboya, the Kenyan nationalist and labor leader who selected Obama, Sr. for a scholarship at the University of Hawaii. Obama, Sr., who was already married with an infant son and pregnant wife in Kenya, married Dunham on Maui on February 2, 1961 and was also the university's first African student. Dunham was three month's pregnant with Barack Obama, Jr. at the time of her marriage to Obama, Sr.

KADU deputy leader Masinda Muliro, according to Reuters, said KADU would send a delegation to the United States to investigate Kenyan students who received "gifts" from the Americans and "ensure that further gifts to Kenyan students are administered by people genuinely interested in Kenya's development.'"

The CIA allegedly recruited Tom M'Boya in a heavily funded "selective liberation" programme to isolate Kenya's founding President Jomo Kenyatta, whom the American spy agency labelled as "unsafe." Mboya received a $100,000 grant for the airlift from the Kennedy Foundation after he turned down the same offer from the U.S. State Department, obviously concerned that direct U.S. assistance would look suspicious to pro-Communist Kenyan politicians who suspected Mboya of having CIA ties. The Airlift Africa project was underwritten by the Kennedy Foundation and the African-American Students Foundation. Obama, Sr. was not on the first airlift but a subsequent one. The airlift, organized by Mboya in 1959, included students from Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Zanzibar, Northern Rhodesia, Southern Rhodesia, and Nyasaland.

Reuters also reported that Muliro charged that Africans were "disturbed and embittered" by the airlift of the selected students. Muliro "stated that "preferences were shown to two major tribes [Kikuyu and Luo] and many U.S.-bound students had failed preliminary and common entrance examinations, while some of those left behind held first-class certificates."

CIA-airlifted to Hawaii, Barack Obama Sr., with leis, stands with Stanley Dunham, President Obama's grandfather, on his right. Obama, Sr. was a friend of Mboya and a fellow Luo. After Mboya was assassinated in 1969, Obama, Sr. testified at the trial of his alleged assassin. Obama, Sr. claimed he was the target of a hit-and-run assassination attempt after his testimony.

Obama, Sr., who left Hawaii for Harvard in 1962, divorced Dunham in 1964. Obama, Sr. married a fellow Harvard student, Ruth Niedesand, a Jewish-American woman, who moved with him to Kenya and had two sons. They were later divorced. Obama, Sr. worked for the Kenyan Finance and Transport ministries as well as an oil firm. Obama, Sr. died in a 1982 car crash and his funeral was attended by leading Kenyan politicians, including future Foreign Minister Robert Ouko, who was murdered in 1990.

CIA files indicate that Mboya was an important agent-of-influence for the CIA, not only in Kenya but in all of Africa. A formerly Secret CIA Current Intelligence Weekly Summary, dated November 19, 1959, states that Mboya served as a check on extremists at the second All-African People's Conference (AAPC) in Tunis. The report states that "serious friction developed between Ghana's Prime Minister Kwame Nkrumah and Kenyan nationalist Tom Mboya who cooperated effectively last December to check extremists at the AAPC's first meeting in Accra." The term "cooperated effectively" appears to indicate that Mboya was cooperating with the CIA, which filed the report from field operatives in Accra and Tunis. While "cooperating" with the CIA in Accra and Tunis, Mboya selected the father of the president of the United States to receive a scholarship and be airlifted to the University of Hawaii where he met and married President Obama's mother.

An earlier CIA Current Intelligence Weekly Summary, secret, and dated April 3, 1958, states that Mboya "still appears to be the most promising of the African leaders." Another CIA weekly summary, secret and dated December 18, 1958, calls Mboya the Kenyan nationalist an "able and dynamic young chairman" of the People's Convention party who was viewed as an opponent of "extremists" like Nkrumah, supported by "Sino-Soviet representatives."

In a formerly Secret CIA report on the All-Africa Peoples Conference in 1961, dated November 1, 1961, Mboya's conservatism, along with that of Taleb Slim of Tunisia, are contrasted to the leftist policies of Nkrumah and others. Pro-communists who were elected to the AAPC's steering committee at the March 1961 Cairo conference, attended by Mboya, are identified in the report as Abdoulaye Diallo, AAPC Secretary General, of Senegal; Ahmed Bourmendjel of Algeria; Mario de Andrade of Angola; Ntau Mokhele of Basutoland; Kingue Abel of Cameroun; Antoine Kiwewa of Congo (Leopoldville); Kojo Botsio of Ghana; Ismail Toure of Guinea; T. O. Dosomu Johnson of Liberia; Modibo Diallo of Mali; Mahjoub Ben Seddik of Morocco; Djibo Bakari of Niger; Tunji Otegbeya of Nigeria; Kanyama Chiume of Nyasaland; Ali Abdullahi of Somalia; Tennyson Makiwane of South Africa, and Mohamed Fouad Galal of the United Arab Republic. …

Jen Moore talked about a person she did not name as being an owner of theaters I had thought that must have been the Kutschera;s since Franz Kutchera was a propogandist and use the Von Trapp Whitehead singers.

But was the theaters owners Jospeh Kennedy who brought the Von Trapps and Norma Jean into the USA?

Jen Moore does slightly jumble inromation a bit to anomymize it (keep from narrowing down the pool guesswork) this I think was of my mother, daughter of Maria Kutchera who was a neice of Franz Kutchera tied to that "codon" of Hitler. Born in the USA GLorian was under a hidden identity. It is possible also the theater owner was in the USA and Joseph Kennedy who Rose his wife and he got into the USA and helped hide the Maria Kutchera and King Edward VIII children (or Prince Albert children)

Task Froce looking at my Edward Donegan home with my mother GLorian Donegan. -Okay I'm good I was going to touch the last few interviews to the last video I'm actually obviously in the same place overlooking the beautiful city of Washington DC as the lights go down in a great location but it's too hard to attach multiple interviews without them getting kind of mixed up in order so the last video I did I I can't on the pinned tweet is interview number three and that goes into a little bit about my meeting this child of one of Hitler's top codons she was a you know kind of German royalty she was a Nazi at 8 years old and her survival through the war and eventually get into the United States I didn't go into much detail on part number three so in this interview it is a very extensive detail actually about my meeting her in 2009-2010 the secret she shared with me the doctor documentation transcripts pictures proof identities and certain people and really help bridge the gap for me from what I knew in my various professions including law enforcement and psychology and what I learned working undercover positions and through my research and obviously interested interesting and interesting excuse me in history and political science but she was that one of the major probably the major gap-filler for me she was a legitimate child of when I'm Nazis top guys and he set up a one of his first kind of command centers inside her father's theater her father owned all the theaters in Munich in Germany at the time which 1930s 3-8 was very rare and so those theaters were used to indoctrinate soldiers and children and various people and so the this person that I met was 70 91 I met her and she died at age 80 a year and a half but I did spend a year and a half with her going into the most traumatic human experiences that I've ever heard and I've heard many many horrible tragic trauma things and seeing them as well so that's what this interview is about I hope you enjoy it and of course it goes even further into like I said identities and starting to reveal some of that so this is interviewed number four his wife Rose Fitzpatrick herself came from politics (and music and European travels.)

John Francis "Honey Fitz" Fitzgerald (February 11, 1863 - October 2, 1950) was an American Democratic politician from Boston, Massachusetts. Fitzgerald served as mayor of Boston and a member of the United States House of Representatives. He also made unsuccessful runs for the United States Senate in 1916 and 1942 and governor of Massachusetts in 1922.

Fitzgerald maintained a high profile in the city whether in or out of office, and his theatrical style of campaigning and charisma earned him the nickname "Honey Fitz".

First term (1906-1908) In December 1905, Fitzgerald was elected Mayor of Boston. Fitzgerald was the first American-born Irish Catholic to be elected mayor. [likely drawing on the swell of Irish immigrants following the Great Potato Famine and TRoubles in Ireland.]

He was the father of Rose Fitzgerald and maternal grandfather of her sons President John F. Kennedy, Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, and Senator Ted Kennedy. In his old age, Fitzgerald helped his grandson John F. Kennedy win his first election to Congress.

In her teens, Rose Fitzpatrick became acquainted with her future husband, Joseph Patrick "Joe" Kennedy, whom she met while their families were vacationing in Maine. He was the elder son of businessman/politician Patrick Joseph "P.J." Kennedy (a political rival of Honey Fitz) and Mary Augusta Hickey. Kennedy would go on to court Fitzgerald for more than seven years, much to her father's disapproval.

Fitzgerald studied at the convent school Kasteel Bloemendal in Vaals, Netherlands, and graduated from Dorchester High School in 1906. She also attended the New England Conservatory in Boston, where she studied piano. The New England Conservatory of Music (NEC) is a private music school in Boston, Massachusetts.

After being refused permission by her father to attend Wellesley College, Fitzgerald enrolled at the Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart (as it was then known) in Manhattan, an institution that did not grant degrees at the time. Kennedy later said that her greatest regret was "not having gone to Wellesley College," saying that it was "something I have felt a little sad about all my life." However, Rose eventually grew fond of the convent school, saying that the religious training she received became the foundation of her life.

In 1908, Fitzgerald and her father embarked on a tour of Europe and had a private audience with Pope Pius X at the Vatican.

On October 7, 1914, at age 24, she married Kennedy in a modest ceremony at the small chapel of the residence of Archbishop William Henry O'Connell in Boston. They initially lived in a home in Brookline, Massachusetts, that is now the John Fitzgerald Kennedy National Historic Site, and later a 15-room vacation home at Hyannis Port on Cape Cod, which became the Kennedy family's lasting base. Their nine children were Joseph Jr. (Joe), John (Jack), Rose (Rosemary), Kathleen (Kick), Eunice, Patricia (Pat), Robert (Bobby), Jean, and Edward (Ted).

In March 1926, Joseph Kennedy moved to Hollywood to focus on running film studios. Rose Kennedy his wife was on an extensive European trip https://www.jfklibrary.org/asset-viewer/archives/rofkpp#id1. Typed transcript about trip to Europe from Diary Notebook, 13 and 21 August 1926 (ROFKPP-001-011)(and watching over Norma Jean?] At that time, film studios were permitted to own exhibition companies, which were necessary to get their films on local screens. With that in mind, he bought controlling shares in Keith-Albee-Orpheum Theaters Corporation (KAO), which had more than 700 vaudeville theaters across the United States that had begun showing movies. In October 1928, he formally merged his film companies FBO and KAO to form Radio-Keith-Orpheum (RKO) and made a large amount of money in the process. Kennedy had no interest in vaudeville; he just wanted the theaters, which he planned to convert to movie houses for the film booking interests he ran in cooperation with Radio Corporation of America (RCA). As the developer of photophone, a sound system for the new "talkies", RCA needed to forge a connection with Hollywood to sell its product. At the same time Kennedy knew that he needed to compete in the new market of sound films and to do so he would have to have access to a technology that was not proprietary.

Kennedy generated windfall profits from reorganizing and refinancing several Hollywood film studios. He began with film distribution in New England (buying first movie theaters in Massachusetts) but quickly moved on to industry-wide arrangements and production. While still at Hayden, Stone & Co., Kennedy boasted to a colleague, "Look at that bunch of pants pressers in Hollywood making themselves millionaires. I could take the whole business away from them." One small studio, Film Booking Offices of America (or FBO), specialized in Westerns produced cheaply. Its owner was in financial trouble, and asked Kennedy to help find a new owner. Kennedy formed his own group of investors and bought it for $1.5 million.

Keen to buy the Pantages Theatre chain, which had 63 profitable theaters, Kennedy made an offer of $8 million (equivalent to $136.3 million in 2022). It was declined. He then stopped distributing his movies to Pantages. Still, Alexander Pantages declined to sell. However, when Pantages was later charged and tried for rape, his reputation took a battering, and he accepted Kennedy's revised offer of $3.5 million (equivalent to $59.6 million in 2022). Pantages, who claimed that Kennedy had "set him up", was later found not guilty at a second trial. The girl who had accused Pantages of rape, Eunice Pringle, confessed on her deathbed that Kennedy was the mastermind of the plot to frame Pantages.

Many estimate that Kennedy made over $5 million (equivalent to $85.2 million in 2022) from his investments in Hollywood. During his three-year affair with film star Gloria Swanson, he arranged the financing for her films The Love of Sunya (1927) and the ill-fated Queen Kelly (1928). The duo also used Hollywood's famous "body sculptor", masseuse Sylvia of Hollywood. Their relationship ended when Swanson discovered that an expensive gift from Kennedy had actually been charged to her account.

Political career

SEC Chairman (1934-1935)

In 1932, Kennedy supported Franklin D. Roosevelt in his bid for the presidency. This was his first major involvement in a national political campaign, and he donated, lent, and raised a substantial amount of money for the campaign.

In 1934, Congress established the independent Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) to end irresponsible market manipulations and dissemination of false information about securities. Roosevelt's brain trust drew up a list of recommended candidates for the SEC chairmanship. Kennedy headed the list, which stated he was "the best bet for Chairman because of executive ability, knowledge of habits and customs of business to be regulated and ability to moderate different points of view on Commission."

Kennedy sought out the best lawyers available giving him a hard-driving team with a mission for reform. They included William O. Douglas and Abe Fortas, both of whom were later named to the Supreme Court. The SEC had four missions. First was to restore investor confidence in the securities market, which had collapsed on account of its questionability, and the external threats supposedly posed by anti-business elements in the Roosevelt administration. Second, the SEC had to get rid of penny-ante swindles based on false information, fraudulent devices, and get-rich-quick schemes. Thirdly, and much more important than the frauds, the SEC had to end the million-dollar maneuvers in major corporations, whereby insiders with access to high-quality information about the company knew when to buy or sell their own securities. A crackdown on insider trading was essential. Finally, the SEC had to set up a complex system of registration for all securities sold in America, with a clear set of rules, deadlines and guidelines that all companies had to follow. The main challenge faced by the young lawyers was drafting precise rules. The SEC succeeded in its four missions, as Kennedy reassured the American business community that they would no longer be deceived and taken advantage of by Wall Street. He trumpeted for ordinary investors to return to the market and enable the economy to grow again. Kennedy's reforming work as SEC Chairman was widely praised on all sides, as investors realized the SEC was protecting their interests. He resigned from the SEC in September 1935.

Chairman of U.S. Maritime Commission (1937-1938)

In 1936, Roosevelt sought Kennedy's help on the campaign, and Kennedy responded with his book I'm for Roosevelt, which he had published and made sure was widely distributed. The book presented arguments for why businessmen should support Roosevelt and the New Deal, told from the perspective of Kennedy's own personal endorsement. The book had significant impact in the business community and after his re-election, Roosevelt appointed Kennedy as Chairman of the U.S. Maritime Commission, which built on his wartime experience in running a major shipyard. Kennedy spent only ten months at the Commission.

The Special Relationship and the Birth of Treason

It was not the Kennedy family plan to commit treason against the USA or war crimes that Nixon and others planned out under the Marhall Plan and MK-Ultra run by the NSC under Vice President Nixon called "Executive Action." While the plans were made by the Congress of the USA, high ranking CIA officials and international participants, it was all illegal, all plotting overthrows and after Cuba and after the appointment of Robert F. Kennedy as attorney General on JFK's first acts as President the Kennedy war against V.P. Nixon, George H.W. Bush, Sam Giancana, Marcello, and many others began on day one and continued to escalate. If you ask Wayne Madesen the CIA plans to create Barrack Obama Jr likely in the plan to make Suharto strongman lead Indonesia was well under way since 1958 or so and continued despite Allen Dulles and Charles Cabell being fired by JFK. The Donegan's and the Joseph Kennedy Jr. Foundation and Ford Foundation had created many of the plans for Indonesia the Kennedy's after rebelled against. Marilyn Monore and my family were a part of that plan but like the Kennedy's and Monroe are victims of it.

Paul Schrade and Robert F. Kennedy had a common story about to become a national campaign matter in 1968. Paul Schrade was part of the labor movement RFK was backing and the North American Aviation story of CIA activities in WWII and the Cold War. Nixon and the CIA were fighting labor in the world and the USA. The Donegan family my family and the CIA role of my North American Aviation CIA history is the material tie between these events.

British (England and its colonies) and the USA were leading the post-WW II effort to fight against Communism. Cuba received the most press attention but in some ways Ireland, Guatemala, The Dominican Republic, Vietnam, and Indonesia were equally or more important to the thinking of independence minded JFK and RFK than the level of press attention to those countries indicate.

The Troubles were an ethno-nationalist conflict in Northern Ireland that lasted for about 30 years from the late 1960's to 1998. Also known internationally as the Northern Ireland conflict, it began in the late 1960s and is usually deemed to have ended with the Good Friday Agreement of 1998.

Great Britain and the USA have long worked in the world together as Western powers. In the years following WW II this became controversial between the WASPS and Irish Roman Catholics

Google AI Overview

Ireland's recognition by the United Nations occurred on December 14, 1955, when it was admitted as the 63rd member. This membership has been a cornerstone of Irish foreign policy since then. Ireland's active participation in the UN, including its recent term on the Security Council (2021-2022), has contributed to the country's international standing and its engagement in issues like human rights, peacekeeping, and development.

Elaboration

Initial Challenges:

While Ireland's neutrality during World War II initially led to its exclusion from the UN's founding, it eventually applied for membership in 1946.

Key Milestones:

Ireland's journey to UN membership involved overcoming initial obstacles, including a veto from the Soviet Union.

Ongoing Engagement:

Beyond membership, Ireland has actively participated in UN activities, including:

- UN Human Rights Council: Ireland was elected to the UN Human Rights Council in 2012 for a three-year term.
- UN Security Council: Ireland has served as a non-permanent member of the Security Council on four occasions (1962, 1981-82, 2001-02, and 2021-2022).
- Peacekeeping: Ireland has a long history of contributing to UN peacekeeping missions since 1958.

Foreign Policy Priorities:

Ireland's UN engagement reflects its commitment to multilateralism, the rule of law, and the promotion of international peace and security.

Irish Aid:

Ireland also provides financial support to UN-led humanitarian and development efforts through its Irish Aid program.

Historians now say Wild Bill Donovan and his disciples, the Bush and Walker families, FDR, and others were part of the Family Jewels program

This included the Salvation Army and extensive intelligence work together. George H.W. Bush a WASP and under POTUS Eisenhower VPOTUS Nixon was part of a CIA run oil business that were non-Congressional funding for CIA activities via profit centers, CIA "proprietary interests," CIA owned and controlled private enterprises. Activities included purchasing and using military surplus and feeding intel gained around the world to CIA headquarters. Phillip Twombly was another. In addition George H.W. Bush had started setting up in 1957 to 1958 fake identities for those in the Family Jewels Program including planning for the CIA at McMartin Preschool and Franklin Nebraska Boystown. Even much later as president he will be connected to recruiting CIA placed orphans into families around the world. He and Donald Barr of the OSS CIA were doing this together. Many direct witness accounts tie George H.W. Bush and his circle of political operatives to the activities in those preschools and the mainstream media has done exposes on that activity even done from within the White House when he was V.P. in the 1980's.

It is complicated but what began as hiding some bastard children of the Windsor family (Albert and Edward) via Maria Von Trapp in Los Angeles and North Carolina turned into that DNA being studied and tested in Eugenics and Genetics for defects. In the next generation the hidden identies children tied to the Windsor family had more test children, some in orphanages and some selected to place into political and media family lines to be groomed for political or media life.

Phillip A. Twombly from Spartacus Educational

Phillip A. Twombly was Executive Vice President of Coca Cola for their Caribbean operations. Later he owned a bank in Fullerton, California. According to Chauncey Holt this bank was used to distribute CIA funds for covert operations.

In 1963 Holt received instructions from Twombly to provide false ID documents for Lee Harvey Oswald. These documents (in the names of Lee Harvey Oswald and Alek Hiddell) were delivered by a man called George Reynolds. In August, 1963, Twombly asked Holt to travel to New Orleans, where he met Oswald and Carlos Bringuier.

Chauncey Holt later claimed he was went to Dallas in November, 1963, with Charlie Nicoletti, James Canty and Leo Moceri. In Dallas he passed on forged documents and guns (with silencers) to Charles Harrelson and Charles Rogers (Richard Montoya). Holt was told that "an incident was going to be created which could be laid at the door of pro-Castro Cubans. The word attempted assassination was never used. We assumed that from all this light loaded ammunition that maybe somebody was going to try to take a shot from somewhere, probably the Dal-Tex building, or one of the buildings around there. But at no time was it ever intimidated to us that an assassination or attempted assassination on Kennedy." - https://spartacus-educational.com/JFKtwombly.htm

A bumbling attempt by Australian and British intellgigence to put a birth certificate of Barrack OBama Jr. in Kenya

Who else was in on that plan? THe CIA had close connections to Barrack Obama Sr in Kenya and Madelyn Payne Dunham in Hawaii.

Within a few days the [Mombasa Kenya birth certificate for Barrack Obama Jr. was clearly revealed to be a fake - it was actually a forgery based on a copy of an Australian Registration of Birth issued to one David Jeffrey Bomford (who was born in South Australia in 1959) which was grabbed off the Internet and used as a template for creating the fake Kenyan certificate:

(Note the many features shared by these documents: Same certificate number, same book number, same page number, and the remarkable similarities in names - the Registrar listed on the Australian document is G.F. Lavender, while on the Kenyan document, it's E.F. Lavender; the District Registrar listed on the Australian document is J.H. Miller, while on the Kenyan document it's M.H. Comedy. Via The Washington Independent, the Australian Broadcast Channel found the man whose birth certificate was used in the latest chapter of the racist, birther movement's quest to prove Barack Obama isn't really an American citizen:

DINA ROSENDORFF: Looking over the documents in question Mr Bomford still can't quite believe his eyes.

DAVID JEFFREY BOMFORD: It's little old me and my mum and everything else up there. Oh I definitely confirm that the birth certificate was mine. That was quite easy to see – my address, even the style of the birth certificate was an old South Australian one.

So it's quite easy to identify that it's mine.

DINA ROSENDORFF: And looking at the fake Kenyan birth certificate what do you make of it?

DAVID JEFFREY BOMFORD: It's definitely a copy of my certificate. It's so laughable it's ridiculous.

Unfortunately, there is nothing too ridiculous for the birthers to latch onto. Oh, and Lou Dobbs. - https://www.dailykos.com/stories/2009/8/4/761742/-

I Ed Donegfan assert George H.W. Bush and his Eastern Establisment allies were hiding the identities of those in those schools and shot JFK to keep the British based Family Jewels program secret.

Rafer Johnson pressed his face against Sirhan's and looked straight in his eyes. "Why did you do it?" he demanded. The gunman said nothing. Johnson placed a clenched fist on Sirhan's forehead. "Why did you do it?" "I'll explain it," said Sirhan. "Shut up!" someone cried, and that was the end of it.

As chaos swirled around the pantry, wild-eyed memorabilia collector Michael Wayne ran out through the Colonial Room and into the lobby with a rolled poster in his hand. A voice called out: "Stop him! He's getting away!" Several bystanders chased Wayne into a cul-de-sac, and Ace guard Augustus Mallard handcuffed him. Wayne pleaded innocence-he was just running for a phone. Several witnesses later claimed they saw a black metal object hidden inside the poster, but no gun was ever found.

FIFTEEN WHo killed Bobby by Shane O' Sullivan

The Manchurian Candidate In 1959, Richard Condon published his second novel, The Manchurian Candidate, a heady psychodrama of assassination, conspiracy, and paranoia. It pushed all the hot buttons of the time-the Communist witch hunts of McCarthyism and the threat of Communist brainwashing evoked by American POWs returning from the Korean War with accounts of mind manipulation. Protagonist Raymond Shaw is a hypnotically programmed assassin, a U.S. soldier brainwashed by the North Koreans whose father is running for vice president in a campaign orchestrated by his mother, Eleanor Iselin. The Iselins pose as McCarthyites but are actually Communist agents. Raymond's mission is to assassinate the presidential nominee so that his father and the Communists can rise to power. Every time Raymond hears the phrase "Why don't you pass the time by playing a little solitaire?" it triggers a hypnotic trance in which he kills, with no memory of having done so. In 1962, with Frank Sinatra playing Major Bennett Marco, Shaw's former comrade (and Laurence Harvey as Shaw), John Frankenheimer directed the film of the book, which became a cult classic. Frankenheimer reflected on the film before his death in 2002: I became good friends with Bobby, who loved the movie. I made all the films for Bobby's 1968 campaign, he stayed at my house, and I drove him to the Ambassador Hotel on the night he died. Did I think that the political assassination in The Manchurian Candidate prompted Sirhan Sirhan to kill Bobby? No way. But the incident affected my perspective on life because, with Bobby, I felt I was part of something that could change the world: he turned me into an idealist. Then, suddenly, it was gone and nothing mattered. My career was defused. It took a long time to reinvest my life with some kind of meaning. I finished the sixties with a bad case of burn-out . . . his death was the defining moment of my life. By 1968, the idea of a "Manchurian candidate" was still dismissed as a Hollywood fantasy, and Dr. Diamond referred to the idea that Sirhan could have been programmed by someone else as a "crackpot theory." But unknown to the public or Sirhan's small army of psychiatrists, the CIA had in fact been working on their own "Manchurian candidate" since the early 1950s. Dr. Diamond did, at least, agree that Sirhan was in a hypnotic trance at the time of the shooting, and there are a number of clues that suggest this. Between nine thirty and eleven that night, Sirhan stood staring, mesmerized by the Teletype machine in the Colonial Room, as described by Western Union operator Mary Grohs: "Well, he came over to my machine and started staring at it. Just staring. I'll never forget his eyes." Vincent Di Pierro's strongest impression of Sirhan was "that sick smile on his face" while he was shooting. Several other witnesses remarked on this strange smile; one also described how Sirhan's brow was furrowed in "tremendous concentration" as he fired.-

O'Sullivan, Shane. Who Killed Bobby? : The Unsolved Murder of Robert F. Kennedy . Kindle Edition.

Here is something very weird. -Sirhan's first contact with the police came on AUGUST 4, 1963 [Barrack Obama Jr. said to be 2 year birthday], when he approached Officer Cannow at an intersection near the Sirhan house and said he'd had an argument with his mother and was afraid to go home. Cannow brought him home and was told by Mrs. Sirhan that Sirhan was at an age where he would not listen to the advice of his elders. Mother and son started to argue again, so Cannow advised Sirhan to leave the house until he "cooled off."

In 1968 former Congressman and former V.P. Nixon would run for President against likely Democrat candidate RFK. RFK would be shot in the Nixon Southern California political stronghold. Max Rafferty was running for US Senate on the GOP slate.

Max Rafferty was a Nixon like Los Angeles area politician who in 1968 was running for US Senate. At the Rafferty Party were shadowy figures tied to the Flying Tigers and the woman in the Polka Dot Dress and Sirhan Sirhan. That Rafferty party seems linked to Nixon enemy RFK and the assasination of RFK per the Polka Dot File book.

Nixon had run for Congress in 1946 in Los Angeles and later bacame VP after being part of the Marshall Plan planning in congress.

PREFACE - The Polka Dot File on the Robert F. Kennedy Killing: The Paris Peace Talks Connection

In the first few minutes of June 6, 1968, Sirhan Sirhan, a Palestinian youth, shot at Sen. Robert F. Kennedy as he passed through the kitchen of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles. There is credible evidence that there was a second gun firing, raising doubts about who killed the Senator.

Seconds after the shooting stopped, a young woman in a polka-dot dress ran out of the kitchen, past Sandra Serrano, a Kennedy campaign worker. The woman shouted, "We shot him, we shot him." Asked who they shot, the woman replied, "Kennedy," and she ran into the morning darkness and history, never to be found.

Early in the investigation, witnesses reported having seen her in several places inside the hotel, accompanie by Sirhan and two other me Today Sirhan, in his appeal for a re-trial, claims to have been a "Manchurian Candidate" and the "Girl in the Polka-Dot Dress" his trigger - a "Manchurian Candidate" being a person Induced to commit murder while under hypnosis. This book concerns itself only with my first-person experience.

I was then a reporter with the Hollywood Citizen News, and I spent many hours hunting for the mysterious "polka-dot girl" - long after the police lied about her existence, saying there was no such person, because they had failed to find her.

Here is the day-to-day account of my hunt for the mystery woman. The story here is a firsthand narrative of my personal, detailed investigation, recorded as it happened. It includes actual, accurate transcripts of interviews I conducted before the police or the FBI intimidated the witnesses into changing their stories. FBI and Los Angeles police records clearly show that my investigation was more advanced than theirs.

"The girl in the polka-dot dress" remains a mystery today. Yet many know she is the key to solving the Robert F. Kennedy killing.

The same day, and by coincidence, surfing the Internet I ran into mentions of several books written about Richard Nixon's conspiracy to scuttle the Paris Peace Talks. When I read the names of the Nixon co- conspirators, I was shocked and stunned to recognize one of them as a person the "girl in the polka-dot dress" had mentioned as having met in New York, just three days before the assassination. That spurred me to renew my investigation. I reviewed my notes and tapes and decided to publish this firsthand account.

The time has finally arrived for me. I feel responsibility to complete the record of such a seminal moment in American political history. In doing so I want to thank Lisa Pease and Shane O'Sullivan, fearless investigators, for their encouragement. My children finally get their wish, and this book is dedicated to them.

No one knew that "the girl in the polka-dot dress" had met with Anna Chennault the week of the assassination. Not the LAPD, not the FBI. Only Fahey, Faura and the "girl in the polka-dot dress."

None of the investigators, and over time the researchers and historians of the killing, made the connection between the two conspiracies since the "peace talks" conspiracy was top secret, and neither Faura nor Life magazine had revealed that the "polka-dot girl" had met with Anna Chennault three days before the killing.

Did "National security" trump Faura and Life magazine's investigation because it was headed towards Anna Chennault, presidential candidate Richard Nixon, future Vice President Spiro Agnew and an influential and powerful senator from Texas, John Tower?

- The Polka Dot File on the Robert F. Kennedy Killing: The Paris Peace Talks Connection

The story is made up of the event covered in the RFK assassination story and in the fabric of history in which it occured. The two parts each chapters of The Great Treason Book are concattinated into a single RFK Pamplet file. RFK was (along with Paul Schrade) shot over aircraft politics by Sirhan Sirhan who was a Palestinian put up to the job by imbuing him with a rage such that attempting kill RFK and Paul Schrade was an "automatic behavior" his mid felt was the only escape from the trauma he lived in.

Dr Lo and Jen Moore discuss the Hypnotic production of antisocial and self injurious behavior

"I am sure you've all heard the old wives tale but no hypnotized subject may be forced to do that which is repellent to his moral nature whatever that may be nonsense of course oh you note-takers might set down a reminder to consult brandman's paper experiments in the hypnotic production of antisocial and self-injurious behavior Orwell's 1941 paper which was titled I believe experiments in the hypnotic production of crime or of course Andrew Salters remarkable book conditioned reflex therapy to name only three

- The Manchurian Candidate 1962. When Sirhan Sirhan shot RFK he had been programmed with the rage RFK MUST DIE so intensely his personality structure needed to satisfy the rage or else continue in the trauma. Could this realy happen? Was asked at John Frankenhiemer (Mancurian Candidtate movie producer) home where RFK was staying the weekend he was shot.

The fabric made by all the threads is aircraft developer Howard Hughes and Robert Mahue were industrial devices (Glomar Explorer salvage, military planes) suppliers to the US DOD and CIA. This included surplus planes modified covertly for groups like the Flying Tigers or Chauncey Holt for Guatemala or for the CIA in attacking Cuba. All of this was done in places like SSFL, Inglewood North American Aviation, the atomic proving grounds, and the CIA activities in that area. This is where the Richard Nixon CIA plants operated out of from 1951 through January 1961 and continued briefly under JFK but were called off. This is where the Donegan piece of the story comes in too. Even in 1968 RFK is about to find out what really happened regarding the Indonesia plans by these same group of people and the Manchurian Candidate story.

The Fabric when fully unrolled is longer than WWII and The Battle of Britain. It goes back to 1902 and the death of Cecil Rhodes and the death of the methods of Cecil Rhodes. It goes into Psychological Warfare and 1910 and Queen Mary and her children Edward and Albert and the Kings Speech. During this tine genetics and eugenics were being studied and so were the Windsors.

A Lie Too Big To Fail by Lisa Pease

In 1956, when President Sukarno of Indonesia came to visit the United States, Scott McLeod of the State Department contacted Maheu and asked him to vet hookers for Sukarno from a security standpoint under the CIA's Project Harpstar. Maheu said this was done to "please" Sukarno, but no doubt this was also an attempt to compromise him with photographs and other material for potential blackmail. The problem was, Sukarno's appetite for women was part of his appeal to a segment of the public in Indonesia. A little over a year later, according to Maheu, he got a call from Sheffeld Edwards at CIA, the security offcer who oversaw the Bluebird and ARTICHOKE CIA mind control programs. Edwards wanted Maheu to perform another operation relative to Sukarnoæ Evidently, the Soviets supplied Sukarno with prostitutes too, but one of them was a KGB agent. Edwards was initially asked to contact Maheu by the CIA's Far East Division.

Edwards asked Maheu to make a film purporting to show Sukarno and this Soviet agent having sex to insinuate that Sukarno was under the control of a Soviet agent, to be titled Happy Days. "It was never in any way intended to be a 'porno' movie," Maheu wrote. 836 So Maheu contacted Bing Crosby and his brother Larry. "The reason was simple," Maheu explained. "The Company [CIA] liked Bing and Larry's politics and, after doing a security check on them, felt they could be trusted completely Maheu admitted working with the man who was Sheriff at the time of the Robert Kennedy assassination, Peter Pitchess, on Happy Days for the CIA, but Maheu omitted mention of the involvement of the LAPD in this episode. Initially, the CIA hoped to find footage they could use from existing pornographic movies, supplied by no less than Police Chief William Parker.an It appears Maheu was loath to brag about his connections to the LAPD, which was unusual, as he tended to brag about everything else. When Maheu worked for Hughes, he hired Jack Hooper to head Howard Hughes' personal security detail. Hooper was "a retired Los Angeles Police Department detective he had used on special assignments since the late 1950s, to supervise overall security.

John Meier

JOHN MEIER WAS A TOP AIDE TO HOWARD HUGHES

FROM 1966 TO 1970. He was one of the few people allowed in the room with Hughes. Meier was a computer analyst before and after a stint in the Korean War. He met Howard Hughes in the 19 50s, and impressed Hughes. Meier is a charismatic, articulate and obviously intelligent individual with a mischievous sense of humor, so it's easy to see why Hughes would have wanted this man at his side. Meier did not realize, when he took the job, just how deeply embedded the CIA was within the Hughes organization. For its part, the CIA's nickname for Hughes was "The Stockholder," presumably because so much of his money paid for the operations of "The Company," as the CIA called itself. The CIA was so deeply entwined with the Hughes organization that no less than James Angleton, the 25-year head of the CIA's Counterintelligence unit, spoke at Hughes' small funeral service after he died:

> Howard Hughes! Where his country's interests were concerned, no man knew his target better. We were fortunate to have him. He is a great patriot."

Meier first learned of the CIA's role with Hughes two months after Robert Kennedy was assassinated, in August 1968, when a CIA operative named Michael Merhage, who assumed Meier was also CIA, mentioned his CIA employment. Merhage gave Meier a list of American politicians the CIA wanted to support. The list included former Warren Commissioner and soon-to-be President Gerald Ford. Others on the list included James Eastland, John Tower, Paul Laxalt, Wallace Bennett (father of Robert Bennett, whose Mullen Company PR firm employed E. Howard Hunt, one of the Watergate participants when Hunt was ostensibly "retired"-for the third time-from the CIA.)

When I [Lisa Pease] visited Meier in his home in Canada in the 1990s, he had told me the Robert Kennedy assassination had been organized by Robert Maheu. His proof related to the many daily diaries he had kept all his adult life. At the time, he would not show me nor read to me from his diaries, and I didn't press.

But when I visited him again with David Talbot in 2013, Meier read us diary entries that included the following:

> [June 1, 1968] I completed the speech and the supporting background documentation I had prepared for Robert Kennedy on the AEC underground testing programs in Nevada. Spent the morning with George Roth, my research editor on additional background information. At noon, Bob Maheu called and told me to cancel my trip scheduled for Monday, and wait until after the fifth. I was upset and advised him a schedule had already been arranged and I was to meet with Harry Evans and Paul Schrade of the UAW who were assisting Kennedy in his campaign in California. They were also assisting Howard Hughes and myself in stopping the underground testing in Nevada. ...
> [June 4, 1968] Maheu called in the morning and said he wanted me to call Don Nixon urgently and ask him to fly to Las Vegas to meet with Maheu on Wednesday the 5th. He wanted me to introduce him, as they had never met. That was the reason Maheu wanted me to stay in Vegas and not fly on to L.A. I left a message for Don Nixon He called me at 11 A.M. and advised me that he was very busy and was not able to make the meeting on the 5th. I called Maheu and when he heard Don was not coming out, he told me to call Don back and have him call his brother again. At 3 P.M. Don called me back and I gave him the message to call his brother Richard Nixon. Don was upset that this Maheu would try and run his life!

The OSS and CIA and support for the right-wing "bannana republic" strongmen the CIA had been engaging in before and after WWII were a key part of the history of unions RFK supported and union-busting Nixon supported. Paris Peace Talks on Vietnam Following the strong showing of anti-war candidate Eugene McCarthy in the New Hampshire primary, in March 1968 U.S. President Lyndon B. Johnson halted bombing operations over the northern portion of North Vietnam (Operation Rolling Thunder), in order to encourage Hanoi (the perceived locus of the insurgency) to begin negotiations. Although some sources state that the bombing halt decision announced on March 31, 1968, was related to events occurring within the White House and the Presidents counsel of Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford and others rather than the events in New Hampshire.[7] Shortly thereafter, Hanoi agreed to discuss a complete halt of the bombing, and a date was set for representatives of both parties to meet in Paris. The sides first met on May 10, with the delegations headed by Xuân Thuỷ, who would remain the official leader of the North Vietnamese delegation throughout the process, and U.S. ambassador-at-large W. Averell Harriman. - Wikipedia

The First American Volunteer Group (AVG) of the Republic of China Air Force, nicknamed the Flying Tigers, was formed to help oppose the Japanese invasion of China. Operating in 1941–1942, it was composed of pilots from the United States Army Air Corps (USAAC), Navy (USN), and Marine Corps (USMC), and was commanded by Claire Lee Chennault. Their Curtiss P-40B Warhawk aircraft, marked with Chinese colors, flew under American control. Recruited under President Franklin Roosevelt's authority before Pearl Harbor, their mission was to bomb Japan and defend the Republic of China, but many delays meant the AVG first flew in combat after the US and Japan declared war.

The group consisted of three fighter squadrons of around 30 aircraft each that trained in Burma before the American entry into World War II to defend the Republic of China against Japanese forces. The AVG were officially members of the Republic of China Air Force. The group had contracts with salaries ranging from $250 a month for a mechanic to $750 for a squadron commander, roughly three times what they had been making in the U.S. forces. While it accepted some civilian volunteers for its headquarters and ground crew, the AVG recruited most of its staff from the U.S. military.

The Flying Tigers began to arrive in China in April 1941. The group first saw combat on 20 December 1941, 12 days after Pearl Harbor. It demonstrated innovative tactical victories when the news in the U.S. was filled with little more than stories of defeat at the hands of the Japanese forces, and achieved such notable success during the lowest period of the war for both the U.S. and the Allied Forces as to give hope to America that it might eventually defeat Japan. AVG pilots earned official credit and received combat bonuses for destroying 296 enemy aircraft, while losing only 14 pilots in combat. The combat records of the AVG still exist and researchers have found them credible. On 4 July 1942 the AVG was disbanded and replaced by the 23rd Fighter Group of the United States Army Air Forces, which was later absorbed into the U.S. Fourteenth Air Force with General Chennault as commander. The 23rd FG went on to achieve similar combat success, while retaining the nose art on the left-over P-40s.

Origin

The American Volunteer Group was largely the creation of Claire L. Chennault, a retired U.S. Army Air Corps officer who had worked in China since August 1937, first as military aviation advisor to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in the early months of the Sino-Japanese War, then as director of a Chinese Air Force flight school centered in Kunming. Meanwhile, the Soviet Union supplied fighter and bomber squadrons to China, but these units were mostly withdrawn by the summer of 1940. Chiang then asked for American combat aircraft and pilots, sending Chennault to Washington as an adviser to China's ambassador and Chiang's brother-in-law, T. V. Soong.

Chennault spent the winter of 1940–1941 in Washington, supervising the purchase of 100 Curtiss P-40 fighters and the recruiting of 100 pilots and some 200 ground crew and administrative personnel that would constitute the 1st AVG. He also laid the groundwork for a follow-on bomber group and a second fighter group, though these would be aborted after the Pearl Harbor attack.

Original American volunteer group

Of the pilots, 60 came from the Navy and Marine Corps and 40 from the Army Air Corps. (One army pilot, Albert Baumler was refused a passport because he had earlier flown as a mercenary in Spain, so only 99 actually sailed for Asia. Ten more army flight instructors were hired as check pilots for Chinese cadets, and several of these would ultimately join the AVG's combat squadrons.) The volunteers were discharged from the armed services, to be employed for "training and instruction" by a private military contractor, the Central Aircraft Manufacturing Company (CAMCO), which paid them $600 a month for pilot officers, $675 a month for flight leaders, $750 for squadron leaders (no pilot was recruited at this level), and about $250 for skilled ground crewmen. Some pilots were also orally promised a bounty of $500 for each enemy aircraft shot down, and this was later confirmed by Madame Chiang Kai-shek.

The first batch, some 300 men, departed San Francisco on 10 July 1941 and arrived in Rangoon, Burma, on 28 July, on the Dutch ship Jaegersfontaine, operated by Java-Pacific Lijn. The second batch, some 30 pilots, departed on 24 September 1941 and arrived on 12 November on the Dutch ship Boschfontein. These volunteers used civilian passports on these trips. After arriving in Rangoon, they were initially based at a British airfield in Toungoo for training while their aircraft were assembled and test flown by CAMCO personnel at Mingaladon Airport outside Rangoon. Chennault set up a schoolhouse that was made necessary because many pilots had "lied about their flying experience, claiming pursuit experience when they had flown only bombers and sometimes much less powerful aeroplanes." They called Chennault "the Old Man" due to his much older age and leathery exterior obtained from years flying open cockpit pursuit aircraft in the Army Air Corps. Most believed that he had flown as a fighter pilot in China, although stories that he was a combat ace are probably apocryphal.

Of the 300 original members of the CAMCO personnel, nine were Chinese-Americans recruited from America's Chinatowns. All nine were trained at Allison Engineworks in Indianapolis, Indiana: all were P-40 mechanics. Upon arrival in Kunming, two other Chinese-Americans were hired, a Ford Motor truck specialist and a doctor, raising the total to 11. Prior to 4 July 1942, three of the P-40 mechanics resigned. The official AVG roster lists the original eight.[citation needed] [clarification needed]

The AVG was created by an executive order of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. He did not speak English, however, and Chennault never learned to speak Chinese. As a result, all communications between the two men were routed through Soong Mei-ling, "Madame Chiang" as she was known to Americans, and she was designated the group's "honorary commander."

They called Chennault "the Old Man" due to his much older age and leathery exterior obtained from years flying open cockpit pursuit aircraft in the Army Air Corps. Most believed that he had flown as a fighter pilot in China, although stories that he was a combat ace are probably apocryphal.

Of the 300 original members of the CAMCO personnel, nine were Chinese-Americans recruited from America's Chinatowns. All nine were trained at Allison Engineworks in Indianapolis, Indiana: all were P-40 mechanics. Upon arrival in Kunming, two other Chinese-Americans were hired, a Ford Motor truck specialist and a doctor, raising the total to 11. Prior to 4 July 1942, three of the P-40 mechanics resigned. The official AVG roster lists the original eight.[citation needed] [clarification needed]

The AVG was created by an executive order of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. He did not speak English, however, and Chennault never learned to speak Chinese. As a result, all communications between the two men were routed through Soong Mei-ling, "Madame Chiang" as she was known to Americans, and she was designated the group's "honorary commander." -https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Flying_Tigers

United States Army Air Forces

United States Army Air Forces A total of 15 USAAF pursuit/fighter groups (FG), along with other pursuit/fighter squadrons and a few tactical reconnaissance (TR) units, operated the P-40 during 1941–45. As was also the case with the Bell P-39 Airacobra, many USAAF officers considered the P-40 exceptional but it was gradually replaced by the Lockheed P-38 Lightning, the Republic P-47 Thunderbolt and the North American P-51 Mustang. The bulk of the fighter operations by the USAAF in 1942–43 were borne by the P-40 and the P-39. In the Pacific, these two fighters, along with the U.S. Navy Grumman F4F Wildcat, contributed more than any other U.S. types to breaking Japanese air power during this critical period.

Pacific theaters

The P-40 was the main USAAF fighter aircraft in the South West Pacific and Pacific Ocean theaters during 1941–42. At Pearl Harbor and in the Philippines, USAAF P-40 squadrons suffered crippling losses on the ground and in the air to Japanese fighters such as the A6M Zero and Ki-43 Hayabusa respectively. During the attack on Pearl Harbor, most of the USAAF fighters were P-40Bs, the majority of which were destroyed. However, a few P-40s managed to get in the air and shoot down several Japanese aircraft, most notably by George Welch and Kenneth Taylor.

The Dutch East Indies campaign of 1941–1942 was the conquest of the Dutch East Indies (present-day Indonesia) by forces of the Empire of Japan in the early days of the Pacific campaign of World War II. Allied forces attempted unsuccessfully to defend the islands. The East Indies were targeted by the Japanese for their rich oil resources which would become a vital asset during the war. The campaign and subsequent three-and-a-half-year Japanese occupation was also a major factor in the end of Dutch colonial rule in the region.

In the Dutch East Indies campaign, the 17th Pursuit Squadron (Provisional), formed from USAAF pilots evacuated from the Philippines, claimed 49 Japanese aircraft destroyed, for the loss of 17 P-40s The seaplane tender USS Langley was sunk by Japanese airplanes while delivering P-40s to Tjilatjap, Java. In the Solomon Islands and New Guinea Campaigns and the air defence of Australia, improved tactics and training allowed the USAAF to better use the strengths of the P-40. Due to aircraft fatigue, scarcity of spare parts and replacement problems, the US Fifth Air Force and Royal Australian Air Force created a joint P-40 management and replacement pool on 30 July 1942 and many P-40s went back and forth between the air forces.

The 49th Fighter Group was in action in the Pacific from the beginning of the war. Robert M. DeHaven scored 10 kills (of 14 overall) in the P-40 with the 49th FG. He compared the P-40 favorably with the P-38.

POLKA DOT FILE ON THE ROBERT E KENNEDY KILLING: THE PARIS PEACE TALKS C...

CHAPTER 49

John Fahey's information about the woman he spent the day with having known Anna Chennault would have surely opened up a feverish line of investigation, had Chennault's treasonous activities been known at the time. It tied up with the woman's desire to get to Australia because "the Chinese" could not get her there. She would be safe in Australia.

At the time no one knew (other than President Johnson, his advisors, NSA and FBI and the conspirators), that Anna Chennault was a principal in a conspiracy to scuttle the Paris Peace Talks to help candidate Nixon win the election.

No one knew that "the girl in the polka-dot dress" had met with Anna Chennault the week of the assassination.

Not the LAPD, not the FBI. Only Fahey, Faura and the "girl in the polka-dot dress."

None of the investigators, and over time the researchers and historians of the killing, made the connection between the two conspiracies since the "peace talks" conspiracy was top secret, and neither Faura nor Life magazine had revealed that the "polka- dot girl" had met with Anna Chennault three days before the killing.

Did "National security" trump Faura and Life magazine's investigation because it was headed towards Anna Chennault, presidential candidate Richard Nixon, future Vice President Spiro Agnew and an influential and powerful senator from Texas, John Tower?

But who was Anna Chennault?

Anna Chennault, also known as Anna Chan and Anna Chen, was born (Chen Xiangmei) in Beijing, China, on June 23, 1925. She married Gen. Claire Chennault, the legendary founder of the famed Flying Tigers during the Sino-Japanese war, on Dec. 21, 1947. The Flying Tigers were a group of American mercenary pilots flying for the Chinese during that war.

Their storybook love story and years of marriage is well documented and the subject of several TV productions in Taiwan.

Claire Chennault was a daring pilot who attained the rank of general before he died. He had an avocation for intrigue and intelligence work. He was also a close friend and confidant of Gen. Chiang Kai- shek, who ruled China and fought the communists under Mao Tse Tung, until Mao's forces overwhelmed him and forced him to retreat to Taiwan.

Among Gen. Chennault's many accomplishments and cloak-and-dagger work for the United States during the clandestine war for China against Japan, before Japan attacked Pearl Harbor, was the organizing of the Flying Tigers, and founding Flying Tiger Airlines and Civil Air Transport (CAT), which later morphed into Air America - both of them CIA proprietaries. By the time he died, in 1958, he had a long list of intelligence associations with the U.S. government.

CAT operated until June of 1968, the same month Senator Kennedy died - coincidentally? Anna Chennault, a very rich and enterprising woman became a powerhouse in Republican politics in Washington, D.C., and a member of the Republican National Committee after her husband's death. Being very wealthy and seeking influence, she became known as "Washington's hostess." Her detractors called her "The Dragon Lady."

Michael Jon Hand (8 December 1941) was a US ex-Green Beret known for co-founding the Nugan Hand Bank. He has more recently been the owner of TOPS Knives.

Career

Hand grew up in New York City, where he attended DeWitt Clinton High School. After graduation, he attended Syracuse University, completing a year long course in the State Ranger School. In May 1963, Hand enlisted in the United States Army, where he served in the Army Special Forces ("Green Berets"). After Special Forces training at Fort Bragg, Hand was posted to Vietnam, where he received a Purple Heart, a Silver Star, and the Distinguished Service Cross, the second highest military award in the United States. He received this for his actions on 9 June 1965 in defending the Special Forces camp at Dong Xoai against a Viet Cong attack during the Battle of Dong Xoai.

Reporter Jonathan Kwitny, who wrote extensively on the Nugan Hand Bank, cites a passport document in which Hand claimed to have left the army in May 1966, and from 1966-67 "worked directly for the U.S. government." According to other unnamed sources cited by Kwitny, Hand helped train guerrilla forces in Laos and worked with the Air America crews that supplied them.

In September 1967, Hand moved to Australia, where he found work in real estate, selling development lots. He was a close associate of Bernie Houghton, the owner of the Bourbon & Beefsteak bar in Sydney's Kings Cross, a nightspot notorious for drug use. In 1969, Hand formed his own development company, which soon began doing business with Australian lawyer Francis John Nugan. In 1973, Hand and Nugan founded the Nugan Hand Bank, with Hand concentrating on the international side of the bank. In January 1975, Hand spent over a year in southern Africa seeking to arrange arms deals, at a time when the CIA was providing support to groups such as UNITA in Angola. Efforts to arrange deals included incorporating a company in Pretoria, South Africa, and sending Bernie Houghton with two Nugan Hand employees to the United States to meet Edwin P. Wilson.

Returning to Sydney in March 1976, Hand developed "a close business and social relationship with Murray Riley", a former policeman turned criminal patron of leading Australian criminals. Within a month of his arrival, Hand began transferring cash to Nugan Hand's Hong Kong branch on Riley's behalf. Australian police later concluded that "Throughout 1976 Hand was knowingly involved in drug activity with the 'Riley' group in that he permitted and even encouraged the use of Nugan Hand facilities for the movement of 'drug' money." Following the June 1976 incorporation of a bank branch in the Cayman Islands, Hand moved to Hong Kong in October 1976 to develop the international side of the bank, developing a network of 12 branches across three continents. In 1977-8, as the bank expanded dramatically, Houghton was able to use his connections to bring a range of US military and intelligence figures to the bank. This expansion and influx of links coincided with the collapse of the CIA-linked Castle Bank & Trust in the Bahamas. In August 1977, Hand moved from Hong Kong to Singapore, from where he managed Nugan Hand's international operations until its collapse in 1980.

Nugan Hand collapsed in January 1980 following the apparent suicide of Frank Nugan. Subsequently, Hand shredded many of Nugan Hand's remaining records from both the office and the home of Nugan. He then fled Australia under a false identity, that of a Sydney butcher named Alan Glenn Winter, on a flight to Fiji in late June 1981. Hand wore a false beard and mustache to look like Winter and obtained a passport after getting Winter's birth certificate and having two photos taken. After a week in Fiji, he made his way to Vancouver, British Columbia, and then on to New York City.

In March 1987, Theodore Shackley responded to an article in The New York Times about the Nugan Hand Bank scandal with a letter to the editor stating that the newspaper had incorrectly described his activities in a manner than served to negatively affect public confidence in the CIA. Shackley stated he had met Hand in the mid-1960s while employed by the CIA in Laos and once again in Washington D.C. after retirement, and denied involvement in the scandal stating: "I was in no way involved in establishing the Nugan Hand Bank. I never made or caused to be made any deposit into or withdrawal from that bank. No money over which I exercised any control was ever deposited in this bank."

News reports appeared in the 1980s that claimed Hand had been sighted in a number of different countries, but none of these were ever confirmed. In March 1991, the Australian magazine The Eye reported that Hand was living in the United States, giving an address and other details, but according to reporters following up on the story, Australian authorities indicated that there were no plans to pursue further actions against Hand.

In his 2015 book Merchants of Menace, Peter Butt identified Hand as living under the name of Michael Jon Fuller in Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Paul Schrade was a union leader for the UAW and a Kennedy confidant. Like Bobby Kennedy's son, he always maintained there had been a second gunman.

"The prosecution's own evidence showed that Sirhan fired two shots, missed Kennedy and hit me." Autopsy results seemed to back him up, showing RFK was shot at point-blank range from behind, and that 13 shots were fired. Sirhan's gun held only eight bullets. According to Schrade, RFK Jr. asked for his help explaining what happened to his children. Schrade said, he asked him: "Look, Paul you were there that night. They don't know what happened to their grandfather. Would you please tell them?"

For the rest of his life, Paul Schrade continued to support the causes that Bobby Kennedy had championed.

Joseph Kennedy Sr. did not endear himself to the British population during German air raids on London. As the Blitz attacks grew stronger, the ambassador moved his family out of London to escape the raids. After touring the destruction in London, he remarked at how much he admired the local citizens for their bravery and fortitude in the face of such horrific German attacks. In time, the papers began calling Kennedy, “Jittery Joe.”

Believing that his effectiveness as ambassador was coming to an end, Kennedy, on October 6, 1940, wrote a letter to FDR asking that he be relieved of his duties in London and demanded that he be brought home. If his request was denied, he would come home anyway. The Roosevelt administration accepted Kennedy’s wishes, and he arrived in New York on October 27, arriving at La Guardia Airport. FDR had asked Joe and Rose to come to see him at the White House when they arrived, and they took the train to Washington immediately. After dinner, Joe gave the president a piece of his mind. He told FDR that he did not like the way he was treated in London, saying candidly that he was kept out of the loop as far as policy formulation was concerned. He took a direct swipe at the State Department, saying it was directly responsible for his being shut out of policy making.

Joe arrived home one month before the 1940 presidential election in which FDR was running for an unprecedented third term. The press was aware of the growing rift between FDR and Kennedy, and speculation was the order of the day when it came to what trouble Kennedy might inflict on the campaign. Joe agreed to make a radio speech endorsing the president, which he paid for himself. It cost $20,000 for a nationwide hookup. He endorsed FDR but said that he still believed it wise for the U.S. to stay out of the European war.

The Lend-Lease Act was a law passed in 1941 that allowed the United States to lend or lease war supplies to nations that were considered vital to the defense of the United States. First Broadcast as Prime Minister to the British People

By May 14, the news from the front was uniformly bad. The Germans had broken through the French defences at Sedan, and everywhere the French forces were reeling under a devastating barrage from land and air. “At almost all points where the armies had come in contact,” Churchill later wrote, “the weight and fury of the German attack was overwhelming.” Holland fell on May 15, and Churchill flew to Paris on the same day to confer with the French leaders. It was evident that the military situation was near to catastrophic, and that the military commanders and political leaders were resigned to overwhelming defeat. Churchill agreed to send ten fighter squadrons to France, thereby imperilling the situation in England, as a desperate attempt to restore the spirits of his Ally. On May 19, the Cabinet was informed that Lord Gort was “examining a possible withdrawal towards Dunkirk.” In these sombre circumstances, Churchill made this, his first broadcast as Prime Minister to the British people.

First Broadcast as Prime Minister

I speak to you for the first time as Prime Minister in a solemn hour for the life of our country, of our empire, of our allies, and, above all, of the cause of Freedom. A tremendous battle is raging in France and Flanders. The Germans, by a remarkable combination of air bombing and heavily armoured tanks, have broken through the French defences north of the Maginot Line, and strong columns of their armoured vehicles are ravaging the open country, which for the first day or two was without defenders. They have penetrated deeply and spread alarm and confusion in their track. Behind them there are now appearing infantry in lorries, and behind them, again, the large masses are moving forward. The re-groupment of the French armies to make head against, and also to strike at, this intruding wedge has been proceeding for several days, largely assisted by the magnificent efforts of the Royal Air Force.

We must not allow ourselves to be intimidated by the presence of these armoured vehicles in unexpected places behind our lines. If they are behind our Front, the French are also at many points fighting actively behind theirs. Both sides are therefore in an extremely dangerous position. And if the French Army, and our own Army, are well handled, as I believe they will be; if the French retain that genius for recovery and counter-attack for which they have so long been famous; and if the British Army shows the dogged endurance and solid fighting power of which there have been so many examples in the past - then a sudden transformation of the scene might spring into being.

It would be foolish, however, to disguise the gravity of the hour. It would be still more foolish to lose heart and courage or to suppose that well-trained, well-equipped armies numbering three or four millions of men can be overcome in the space of a few weeks, or even months, by a scoop, or raid of mechanized vehicles, however formidable. We may look with confidence to the stabilization of the Front in France, and to the general engagement of the masses, which will enable the qualities of the French and British soldiers to be matched squarely against those of their adversaries. For myself, I have invincible confidence in the French Army and its leaders. Only a very small part of that splendid Army has yet been heavily engaged; and only a very small part of France has yet been invaded. There is good evidence to show that practically the whole of the specialized and mechanized forces of the enemy have been already thrown into the battle; and we know that very heavy losses have been inflicted upon them. No officer or man, no brigade or division, which grapples at close quarters with the enemy, wherever encountered, can fail to make a worthy contribution to the general result. The Armies must cast away the idea of resisting behind concrete lines or natural obstacles, and must realize that mastery can only be regained by furious and unrelenting assault. And this spirit must not only animate the High Command, but must inspire every fighting man.

In the air - often at serious odds, often at odds hitherto thought overwhelming - we have been clawing down three or four to one of our enemies; and the relative balance of the British and German Air Forces is now considerably more favourable to us than at the beginning of the battle. In cutting down the German bombers, we are fighting our own battle as well as that of France. My confidence in our ability to fight it out to the finish with the German Air Force has been strengthened by the fierce encounters which have taken place and are taking place. At the same time, our heavy bombers are striking nightly at the tap-root of German mechanized power, and have already inflicted serious damage upon the oil refineries on which the Nazi effort to dominate the world directly depends.

We must expect that as soon as stability is reached on the Western Front, the bulk of that hideous apparatus of aggression which gashed Holland into ruin and slavery in a few days will be turned upon us. I am sure I speak for all when I say we are ready to face it; to endure it; and to retaliate against it - to any extent that the unwritten laws of war permit. There will be many men and many women in this Island who when the ordeal comes upon them, as come it will, will feel comfort, and even a pride, that they are sharing the perils of our lads at the Front - soldiers, sailors and airmen, God bless them - and are drawing away from them a part at least of the onslaught they have to bear. Is not this the appointed time for all to make the utmost exertions in their power? If the battle is to be won, we must provide our men with ever-increasing quantities of the weapons and ammunition they need. We must have, and have quickly, more aeroplanes, more tanks, more shells, more guns. There is imperious need for these vital munitions. They increase our strength against the powerfully armed enemy. They replace the wastage of the obstinate struggle; and the knowledge that wastage will speedily be replaced enables us to draw more readily upon our reserves and throw them in now that everything counts so much.

Our task is not only to win the battle – but to win the war. After this battle in France abates its force, there will come the battle for our Island - for all that Britain is, and all the Britain means. That will be the struggle. In that supreme emergency we shall not hesitate to take every step, even the most drastic, to call forth from our people the last ounce and the last inch of effort of which they are capable. The interests of property, the hours of labour, are nothing compared with the struggle of life and honour, for right and freedom, to which we have vowed ourselves.

I have received from the Chiefs of the French Republic, and in particular form its indomitable Prime Minister, M. Reynaud, the most sacred pledges that whatever happens they will fight to the end, be it bitter or be it glorious. Nay, if we fight to the end, it can only be glorious.

Having received His Majesty's commission, I have formed an Administration of men and women of every Party and of almost every point of view. We have differed and quarrelled in the past; but now one bond unites us all - to wage war until victory is won, and never to surrender ourselves to servitude and shame, whatever the cost and the agony may be. If this is one of the most awe-striking periods in the long history of France and Britain, it is also beyond doubt the most sublime. Side by side, unaided except by their kith and kin in the great Dominions and by the wide empires which rest beneath their shield – side by side, the British and French peoples have advanced to rescue not only Europe but mankind from the foulest and most soul-destroying tyranny which has ever darkened and stained the pages of history. Behind them – behind us – behind the Armies and Fleets of Britain and France – gather a group of shattered States and bludgeoned races: the Czechs, the Poles, the Norwegians, the Danes, the Dutch, the Belgians – upon all of whom the long night of barbarism will descend, unbroken even by a star of hope, unless we conquer, as conquer we must, as conquer we shall.

Today is Trinity Sunday. Centuries ago words were written to be a call and a spur to the faithful servants of Truth and Justice: "Arm yourselves, and be ye men of valour, and be in readiness for the conflict; for it is better for us to perish in battle than to look upon the outrage of our nation and our altar. As the Will of God is in Heaven, even so let it be."

O'BRIEN: Let's begin this morning with Robert Kennedy's involvement in Indonesia. I know that you've gone into this in your book, in your manuscript. I understand that his initial involvement was with the releasing of Allen Pope.

Jones: No, no, no. Not at all. His initial involvement with--or at least exposure to--Indonesia was before he took office. I talked with him about Indonesia and its problems when he was in the Senate.

Then, as we discussed earlier, in the fall, shortly after he /John F :· Kenned~_l had been elected, we · in the embassy advised the .State Department that we thought it would be important for him either to visit Indonesia or to invite Sukarno to come to Washington. And so we passed that word oh to him even before he took office. I was able also to report from ·Indonesia the extremely favorable reaction that Sukarno had to Kennedy and the speeches he'd been making during his campaign and the consequent fact that Sukarno had come to the conclusion that he and Kennedy had pretty much the same view of the world--perhaps I shouldn't say "the world," but the same view of the economic and social revolution that was sweeping Asia and Africa. And so I thought that it was important to begin communication between these two men. Sukarno felt very strongly that international relations were based pretty much on personal relations, so that he was anxious to develop a rapport with the new President of the United States. Kennedy responded to this, and early in his administration, as you know, April of the first year, he invited . Sukarno to an unofficial visit to the White House . So that's really when~e the Kennedy involvement with Sukarno began. Pope was not mentioned in the plans for the visit although President Kennedy did bring up the subject during the visit.

The British, of course, are and have been for a century and a half our closest allies. We have disagreed with them on many things from time to time, but basically our ties are very deep and very close. Consequently, even when we had differences with them, we consulted with them regularly. And our differences we~e relatively minor in the stream of ·world issues. In Indonesia most of the European ambassadors were close working colleagues. The Japanese ambassadors who were there during the period were not only close friends, but we were working very closely with the Japanese. But we had special relationships with the British, the Australians and the Canadians due to the long period of association and deep and lasting friendship between our countries.

Obrian: And then /James G.7 Parsons and /Walter P.7 McConaughy and /W. Averell Harriman and {Roger, Jr~7 Hilsman. Starting at the beginning, do you have any strong differences or any strong affiliations or agreements with any of these men? Which one, do you think, was the most effective?

Jones: if I had to pick one, I'd pick Harriman. If two, I'd select Robertson and Harriman. Quite different men representing quite .different points of view.

O'Brian: Well, how about the . ·President's brother here, Robert Kennedy? When does Robert Kennedy become a major factor?

The Packard plant was opened in 1903 and contained 10,000 square feet of floor space and at the time was considered the most modern automobile manufacturing facility in the world: modern, efficient, and massive in scale. By 1908, when an enlargement for the construction of trucks was announced, the factory was already six times larger than when constructed and occupied over fourteen acres of space.[6] At its peak the complex employed 40,000 people, including skilled craftsmen involved in over eighty trades. The plant turned out Packard automobiles from 1903 to 1956, except during World War II, when production was shifted to war material, particularly the Packard V-1650 Merlin, which powered the North American P-51 Mustang fighter plane.

Paul Schrade, once a top aide to UAW leader Walter Reuther and a former leader of the United Auto Workers on the West Coast, who was gravely wounded when Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated in 1968, has died at 97 at his home in Los Angeles.

Former adviser to Robert Kennedy and UAW organizer Paul Schrade, who's impact on the union has been overlooked, died this week. His death was reported by the Los Angeles Times.

"He embodied the spirit of the UAW at its best," said Harley Shaiken, a professor at the University of California, Berkeley.

Activist to the end In recent years, Schrade, who often found himself at odds with the UAW's established leadership even before Reuther's death in 1970, helped campaign for reform in the UAW, making a video in support of the "One-member, One-vote campaign," noted Michael Cannon, a retired member of the UAW's professional staff involved in the reform

Paul Schrade worked at North American Aviation in Los Angeles Inglewood where the Packard Motors Merlin engines were fitted into the P-51s.

Robert F. Kennedy was a crusader as well and died in Los Angeles campaigning with Paul Schrade against unions antagonist Richard Nixon. Strike Breakers in combiation with Strike No Takers (won't use the strike tactic) served to undermine the tool of labor bargainign collectively. The Teamsters were Strike Non Takers.

Treason § 2381 says, "Whoever, owing allegiance to the United States, levies war against them or adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort within the United States or elsewhere, is guilty of treason and shall suffer death, or imprisoned and fined, and incapable of holding any U.S. office." The Power Control Group under the NSC during the Eisenhower years especially under V.P. Nixon rushed on the to Republican ticket by financial backers in a back-room deal and using George H.W. Bush and others tied to oil money and the CFR and English royals and MI6 adhered to British overthrows using corrupt corporate fronts for dirty-wars including against the USA.

The Donegan family was part of what some called the Irish Mafia and it wasn't quite liquor dealing under Joseph Kennedy Sr.

I haven't read an account or at least remmeber a credible one that considered Joseph Kennedy Sr. a prohibition era liquor dealer. Though he did expect the repeal of prohibition and reportedly later profited on liquor sales he was associated with some bootlegger because he was above all else a King Maker in the century of WWI and WWII during which he lived his entire life.

As is now being uncovered before history Sam Giacanca and others were recurited by the CIA and British Secret Service for mafia activities that would do the dirty work of the CIA. Considered thumb-on-the-scale preemption thugs or media friends help bring down political enemies with harassing condescension or praising words of ascension

The nuclear weapons, supersonic flight, space flight and rocketry, were together the new realities of the world after the surrender of Japan ending the super-powers major fights but there were few smaller governments after the end of WWII that shared more than a street address with governments that had existed before during the war or before that. This was the post WWII work and for Great Britain bringing the horses back into the barn, the lost colonies, was important to the new strategy of stopping off-shore missiles an bases held by the enemy.

In WWI FDR relied upon him and some would call it Kennedy Sr. riding the coattails of FDR the Undersecretary of the Navy in WWI tied to England and later in peace an Ambassador to Great Britian (As FDR ascended to the US Presidency) and in close of WWII helping shape the leaders of the post-war world, his own family included. During this time he and the CIA planted Agents of Influence and covert and overt operations through MK-ULTRA that would defeat and preempt non Western movements be they Nazi or Communist.

The Democrat Party was less enthused about these activities and the Roman Catholics from Boston even less enthused than most Democrats. During this time from 1949 an the Marshall plan an the allies working together it was hoped an unstable world map could be formed into what had existed in the time between WWI and WWII yet countries like Indonesia were not independent because during the war many governments were toppled and as the warring super-powers pull back into their own borders nations were experimenting with, claiming, an fighting for full independence or keeping not that they had it.

Nothing of what happened was Joseph Kennedy Sr's plan but in the post WWII era the US made bedfellows of the worst of assassinations expertise and putting that jeanie bak in the bottle was a task John F. Kenedy Robert F. Kennedy could not complete in part because of the capability they were up against and in part because they had partial knowledge of many of the CIA's activities.

Prof. Harry Howe Ransom of Vanderbilt University, considered a leading expert on the C.T.A. and its legal and Congressional authority, said in telephone interview that in his opinion the 1947 statute included “a clear prohibition against any internal security functions under any circumstances.”

Col Fletcher Prout in The Secret Tream: As Ransom points out, “At the first meeting of the NSC in 1947, President Truman indicated that he regarded it as ‘his council,’ that is to say, as a purely advisory body. Later President Eisenhower, although inclined to regard it as ‘the council,’ made clear nonetheless that NSC was absolved of any responsibility per se for national decisions.” The NSC advises; the responsibility for decision is the President’s, insisted Eisenhower. President Kennedy came to office with an apparent bias against the kind of use Eisenhower made of NSC. Borne into office on a great chorus of rhetoric about the need for purposeful, energetic Presidential leadership, Kennedy “at first made little use of the Council” as a formal advisory body. Following the 1961 Cuban fiasco, however, “the NSC was restored somewhat.”

The New York Times shocked the world on Sunday, June 13, 1971, with the publication of the first elements of the Pentagon Papers.3 The first document the Times selected to print was a trip report on the situation in Saigon, credited to the Secretary of Defense, Robert S. McNamara, and dated December 21, 1963. This was the first such report on the situation in Indochina to be submitted to President Lyndon B. Johnson. It came less than thirty days after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and less than sixty days after the assassinations of President Ngo Dinh Diem of South Vietnam and his brother and counselor Ngo Dinh Nhu.

Whether from some inner wisdom or real prescience or merely simple random selection, the Times chose to publish first from among the three thousand pages of analysis and four thousand pages of official documents that had come into its hands that report which may stand out in history as one of the key documents affecting national policy in the past quarter-century-not so much for what it said as for what it signified. This report is a prime example of how the Secret Team, which has gained so much control over the vital foreign and political activities of this government, functions.

Most observers might have expected that the inner group of men who had worked so closely with President Kennedy for three years would have lost heart in those days following his tragic death. On the contrary, they burst forth, as though from strong bonds and fetters and created this entirely new report, thus shaping the future of the Indochina conflict. Their energy and their new sense of direction seemed almost to rise from the flame of Kennedy’s tomb in Arlington.

In a very prescient paragraph, Ransom shows how important this grasp for power by an inner secret team was becoming as far back as 1952. Even as the NSC was getting started, a struggle for control of that body was under way; and the control was to be elected by gradually making that advisory committee into an operating power center. Ransom’s comment is worth repeating here:

> “Early in NSC’s life, according to President Truman, ‘one or two of its members tried to change it into an operating super-cabinet on the British model.’ Truman identifies the members as his first two Secretaries of Defense, James Forrestal and Louis Johnson, who would sometimes, Truman recounts, put pressures on NSC’s executive secretary to use NSC authority to see that various governmental agencies were following NSC policy. The executive secretary declined to do this, on the ground that his was an advisory staff rather than an executing ‘line’ function. Truman fought to keep the subordinate nature of NSC clear to all, emphasizing that Congress had in fact changed the title of NSC ‘Director’ to ‘Executive Secretary.’ Forrestal had, Truman notes, advocated using the British cabinet system as a model for the operation of postwar American government. To change to this system, wrote Truman, “we would have to change the Constitution, and I think we have been doing very well under our Constitution.”

One aspect of the Pentagon Papers that makes them suspect of not being exactly what they are purported to be, that is, an expose of the role of the Pentagon in the United States’ involvement in Vietnam (this is an oversimplified definition of them, but it will serve here) is that they laud the role of the CIA and the overall intelligence community while they disparage the rest of the Government, especially the Pentagon. The following extract is from The New York Times’ book of the Pentagon Papers, in an introductory and formative early chapter, page 6 [an from which Robert F. Kennedy and his close friend from the Rand Corporation Daniel Elseburg who leaked them in part will rely]:

[Daniel Ellsberg (April 7, 1931 - June 16, 2023) was an American political activist, economist, and United States military analyst. While employed by the RAND Corporation, he precipitated a national political controversy in 1971 when he released the Pentagon Papers, a top-secret Pentagon study of U.S. government decision-making in relation to the Vietnam War, to The New York Times, The Washington Post, and other newspapers.

The Pentagon account discloses that most of these major decisions from 1950 on were made against the advice of the American intelligence community. Intelligence analysts in the CIA warned that the French, Emperor Bao Dai and Premier Diem were weak and unpopular and that the Communists were strong. In early August 1954, for example, just before the NSC decided to commit the U.S. to propping up Premier Diem, a national intelligence estimate warned: “Although it is possible that the French and Vietnamese even with firm support from the U.S. and other powers, may be able to establish a strong regime in South Vietnam, we believe that the chances for this development are poor and moreover, that the situation is more likely to continue to deteriorate progressively over the next year.” The NIE continues. Given the generally bleak appraisals of Diem’s prospects, they who made U.S. policy could only have done so while assuming a significant measure of risk.”

And

> A few pages after this statement, the Times version of the Papers tells us that Edward G. Lansdale went to Saigon with a team in August 1954. This date may be one of the correct dates, but the facts are that plans for Lansdale's move to Saigon from Manila, where he had engineered Magsaysay's rise from soldier to President, were laid long before he actually went there with his team. (The author was a frequent visitor to Manila and Saigon from 1952 through 1954 as the commanding officer of a Military Air Transport Service squadron which provided much of the military airlift between those cities in those days, and on more than one flight carried as special passengers members of the Lansdale team, both U.S. and Filipino personnel, to and from Saigon).

A 1951 brochure for a sale of horses from Peter Licavoli's Grace Ranch Chauncey Holt asserts this ranch that was very near Tucson Arizona was a CIA training facility for overthrow activities. He provides records of B-52's and ammunition being bought and sold and he reports flying C-47's with military cargo into nations for the CIA., Holt asserts a souped up Oldsmobile was bought in Arizona and driven to Dealey Plaza. A pickup truck was also acquired and made a stop by "the strip club" in Dallas. Selling off the betting horses freed up the operators of the ranch for CIA activities

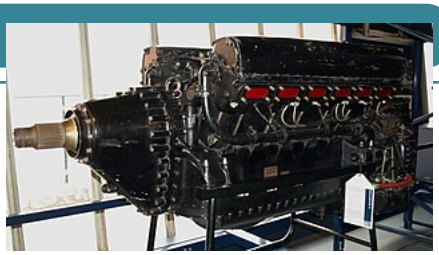
In GraceRanchDispersal1951Picture.png in 1951 the deal with Murder Inc., (Myers Lanskey and his accountant and artist Chauncey Marvin Holt) Ray Ryan, Sam Giacanca (Sam Gold) Enrnie Dunieve, William King Harvey, and others are at work setting up Cold War overthrows as subversion work. George H.W. Bush in the 1950's will be a part of this in CIA backed Zapata Petroleum. There is a long list of nations that should be grouped together, they are the nations The Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean that are possible submarine or land missle points for Soviet encroachment. Further away of the coast of Australia is Australia. Bush and Nixon, Ford, Rockefeller, and others including LBJ and Texas oil have a plan for using dirty war in those nations to back strong men by the businesses in those countries supporting those puppets. With the Strongmen backed Communist attempts at overthrow can be suppressed.

This is a key time for JFK. His father was close to England and embrace these plans. Fault with any of the Kennedy family is limited as the Nixon (US Representative and Vice President Nixon) and the oil based CIA companies left most of the Kennedy's out of full plans most of the time. Senator JFK did defeat V.P. Nixon for the presidency in the November 1961 election but in the ten years since 1951 plans with England, the Vatican, and others were well underway. The assassination of JFK allowed these plans to continue under LBJ who had with Prescott Bush and others been part fo the planning and that planning included Barrack Obama Jr for Indonesia part of ASTUGI planning during the 1950's as world key territories.

This occurred in the Special Relationship with Great Britain and Battle of Britain

The story of the Kennedy assassinations includes the complex and strained relationship with Great Britain and its methods. This will include military hardward and military propaganda including propaganda about the hardware.

Rolls-Royce R (R27) on display at the London Science Museum.



| Design: Rolls Royce | | Model: Merlin |

| Builder: Rolls Royce and Packard Motor Company |

| Most known Appllications: Spitfire and P-51 D |

The rectangular red objects are the exhaust ports blanking plates which would be replaced by the exhaust stubs/pipes when fitted to an aircraft or other vehicle

The first V-1650s, with a one-stage supercharger, equivalent to the Merlin XX, were used in the P-40F Kittyhawk fighter and in Canadian-built Hawker Hurricanes. Later versions based on the Merlin 60 series included a more advanced two-stage supercharger for improved performance at high altitudes. It found its most notable application in the North American P-51 Mustang fighter, improving the aircraft's performance so it could escort Allied heavy bombers from Britain to Germany and back.

This will be shown in more detail and history in this chapter later but the summary is here. Gas compresses. at seal level gravity has pulled atmosphere down to earth at the measure of pressure of 1 atmosphere. As these planes flew higher and higher to reach high altitude bombers whose defense was altitude the single and two stage superchargers compressed thin atmosphere into dense atmosphere for high levels of combustion at high altitude resulted in an exhaust that spit out fire. This property of gasses would create a limit too. Air only moves well at a certain speed. As planes go faster and faster it accumulates in front of the plane gathering into a density the plane can not fly through and the competing structural forces and turbulence of these high forces can destroy the plan as the speed of sound is approached.

These planes flying high overhead could spot and swoop down on land, sea, and airborne target in dive bombinb and strafing operations. Packard Motor Company and the US steal industry could produce these in large quantities.

Much of this occurred with Joseph Kennedy Sr. who must have had some but perhaps not complete or not completely accurate suspicions on how some of his children were assassinated in a story-line of his life and times and his actions being concealed by the actions of another political party who (the Bush family among them) their role in the assassination of JFK mostly successfully until quite recently (mid 2020's.)

In WWI two later public figures were associated with a rising star and became rising stars themselves in US politics. FDR in WWI was Undersecretary of the US Navy. Joseph Kennedy Sr. during that time got ships into the water with steel companies building them in Massachusetts Harbor and later Admiral Halsey worked with the British in the War Effort just as FDR and Kennedy Sr were doing.

Following WWI the Von Trapp family got a new singing coach from the convent, this in 1926. She left the convent pregnant gave birth in the USA to some bastard children tied to the Windsors, exact story still unknown to most including to me. As WWII approached the Von Trapp Family Singers entered the USA. Finally, in the Cold War those bastard children (dare I say it now, Glorian Gainey my mother and Norma Jean) became part of more history, asked to be part of faking family histories as a public record so children could be given influential parents in whose shadow children of future influence would be raised and groomed by the CIA. This political-party plan of wealthy oil business types rubbed JFK the wrong way and he went for independent nations freeing themselves of the big money family and plans of subversion, overthrows, robber-barons, and exploitation of nations like Guatemala, Cuba, and Indonesia.

During WWI and WWII and the Cold War the USA was very close to Great Britain and this was part of Joseph Kennedy Sr who along with the Queen of England (The Queen Mother) of WWII helped make and groom world leaders himself and his children and others included as world elites in a doomed future he could not foresee: Incomprehensible evil from the Operation 40 that used oil money to fund the assassination of his own son JFK and also the eruption of 1960's violent in the Irish Nation-States over independence from Great Britain.

It is in this story line nearly every president of the USA after FDR becomes part of a world-wide plot laid out by W. Averell Harriman for a post-WWII "devils chessboard" some in the USA contested and some in the USA were assassinated over.

P-51C THUNDERBIRD HISTORY JIMMY STEWART & JACKIE COCHRAN

The letter "P" in military aircraft designations indicates the aircraft's role as a pursuit aircraft. The term "P" comes from the French Avion de Chasse, which means "pursuit" or "hunt" airplane. The US Army Air Service used the "P" designation from 1924 to 1947 to indicate pursuit aircraft. After World War II, the USAF adopted the term "fighter" (F). For example, the Lockheed F-80C Shooting Star was redesignated F-80 in 1948. - Wikipedia

The first American order for 150 P-51s, designated NA-91 by North American, was placed by the US Army on 7 July 1940.[5] This was on behalf of the RAF in a Lend-Lease deal.[6] All but the last 57 went to the British. After the attack on Pearl Harbor, the USAAF 'held back' these Mustang Mk IAs for their own use.[7] Fifty-five of these P-51-1s were outfitted with a pair of K.24 cameras in the rear fuselage for tactical low-level reconnaissance and re-designated F-6A (the "F" for photographic, although confusingly also still referred to as the P-51 or P-51-1). Two kept their P-51-1 designation and were used for testing by the USAAF. It was the F6 verion of the Mustang my father flew during WWII. As John Wayne says of his recon plane in Jet Pilot all he could do is photograph the enemy. In my father's case (who also used that line) the M2 machine guns were removed from the wings and cameras installed. The fire button function was replaced as a camera rolling button function.

Rolls Royce started calling their aircraft engines after birds of prey with the World War One "Eagle". We then had the more famous ones - Merlin, Kestrel, Griffon and the not so famous Goshawk, Exe, Peregrine and Vulture. They decided to call their jet engines after British rivers (Derwent, Tay, Trent, Dart, Nene, Tyne, Avon, Conway etc) Then they gave up on the river names and went down the boring "numbers" route - RB162, RB211 etc https://www.key.aero/forum/historic-aviation/40151-prewar-british-engine-names

Paul Schrade as a United Auto Worker official in the Packard Motor plant that produced the Rolls Royce Merlin engine for the P-51 giving the fighter the supercharged flight characteristics to hit high altitude Luftwaffe fights and bombers. In 1968 while running for US President to face Richard Nixon in the General Election RFK and Paul Schrade and Others are Shot.

This story as Jen Moore was also telling and I am telling is and too many historic authors to name as I integrate their works is the story, the personal stories, that go into WWI and WII history and Joseph Kennedy Sr will be a key figure in telling its history as WWII closes out and the Cold War begins in 1951 and 1952 and the Long Memo posturing the USA against the front of the Soviet Union.

It was probably Lisa Pease in A Lie Too Big To Fail about Robert Maheu of TWA and Howard Hughes and the role of Maheu in assassinating RFK with a worker for security Eugene Thane Ceaser. Lisa Pease and others pointed out that Joseph Kennedy Sr. was a can- do man in WWI. In Boston his family was connected to the Pope, in industry he was a steel maker when in WWI we needed boats in submarine and naval warfare, and in diplomatic relation the Convent in Salzburg Austria area got a pregnant Maria Kutschera children like Norma Jean and Glorian Gainey adoptions in the USA where they were likely born in Los Angeles County near Peter Lawford's home in Santa Monica, Los Angeles County, California.

FDR rose to become President going into WWII and had his Can-Do man Kennedy Sr become Ambassador to Great Britain. Seeing Great Britain losing and saying so he will go on likely then a classified operation for the neutral USA to build Rolls-Royce engines for the P-51 that was under-powered and low altitude and perhaps to increase production for British aircraft like the Spitfire that used the same engine as well.

This is the story of Paul Schrade whose union built that engine at Packard Motors, Los Angeles overshadowed by Detroit but a place of many car makers.

It is also the story of blackmailed and illegal activities of the CIA against it own citizens the Donegan's included when secret identities of the dark side of WWII history would have been exposed unless victims had to cooperate with the CIA. Two of those blackmailed people were Stanley Armour Dunham who was caught stealing Boeing bomber blueprints for the Nazis and owed the CIA a favor and another was Glorian Gainey who through no fault of her own was born to a Nazi propagandist Maria Kutschera the neice of Franz Kutschera. While Maria Kutchera married Captain Von Trapp a British ally and Baron the ties those people had to death camps was too intense from a PR standpoint among other problems.

At the time of his death Robert F. Kennedy was staying with Manchurian Candidate producer John Frankenheimer in his Los Angeles County home and while there very troubled and later assassinated at the Ambassador Hotel where Frankenheimer was discussing the film with nervous listeners. The blackmail piece here was the story of the P-51 plane and the James Donegan role in it (my father) and also the role of Peter Lawford and others including Joseph Kennedy in WWI, WII, and the Cold War were a thread of history of secret identities (of Glorian Donegan my mother, Norma Jean, and others) played out over generations. Shot along with RFK was Paul Schrade who was part of the P-51 story. At Packard Motors he was an autoworkers union rep who on request of Joseph Kennedy Sr. helped step-up of production of V-12 engines for fighters, this time using the plans given to us by Rolls-Royce for the Merlin Spitfire engine that would be placed in the low altitude P-51 and making it a high performance attack plane of incoming high altitude Luftwaffe bombers.

The apparent assailant who may have shot the fatal shot into RFK from behind (Eugene Thane Ceaser) or assisted in that was tied to Robert Mahue of TWA and also the CIA. Howard Hughes designed new planes for aviation but also retrofitted WWII surplus planes for the CIA in the Cold War at the secret CIA airbase in Licavoli's Grace Ranch in Arizona (where the JFK assassins drove from in the station wagon) for use in Guatamala, and elsewhere.

Los Angeles California and its history -Drawn from Pillory Tools and Fools of the USA itself relying on Wikipeida and other sources

Peter Sydney Ernest Lawford (né Aylen; 7 September 1923 - 24 December 1984) was an English-American actor.[1][2]

He was a member of the "Rat Pack" and the brother-in-law of US president John F. Kennedy and senators Robert F. Kennedy and Edward Kennedy. From the 1940s to the 1960s, he was a well-known celebrity and starred in a number of highly acclaimed films. In later years, he was noted more for his off-screen activities as a celebrity than for his acting; it was said that he was "famous for being famous".[3]

Born in London in 1923, Lawford was the only child of Lieutenant General Sir Sydney Turing Barlow Lawford, KBE (1865-1953) and May Sommerville Bunny (1883-1972). At the time of his birth, his mother was married to Lieutenant Colonel Dr. Ernest Vaughn Aylen DSO,[4] one of Sir Sydney's officers, while his father was married to Muriel Williams.[5] At the time, May and Ernest Aylen were living apart. May confessed to Aylen that the child was not his, a revelation that resulted in a double divorce. Sydney and May wed in September 1924 after their divorces were finalised and when their son was one year old.[6]

Lawford's family was connected to the British aristocracy through his uncle Ernest Lawford's wife (a daughter of the Scottish 14th Earl of Eglinton) as well as his aunt Ethel Turner Lawford (who married a son of the 1st Baron Avebury). His aunt, Jessie Bruce Lawford, another of his father's sisters, was the second wife of the Hon Hartley Williams, senior puisne judge of the Supreme Court of the colony of Victoria, Australia. A relative, through his mother, was Australian artist Rupert Bunny.

Accident (Costing him his right arm and thus sending him to Los Angeles to be a star) At the age of 14, Lawford severely injured his right arm in an accident when it went through a glass door.[11] Irreversible nerve damage severely compromised the use of his forearm and hand,[12] which he later learned to conceal.[13] The injury resulted in his being unable to follow a military career as his parents had hoped.[14] Instead, Lawford pursued a career as an actor, a decision that resulted in one of his aunts refusing to leave him her considerable fortune, as she had originally planned.

In 1938, Lawford was traveling through Hollywood when he was spotted by a talent scout. He was screen tested and made his Hollywood debut in a minor part in the film Lord Jeff starring Freddie Bartholomew.[16][17]

The outbreak of World War II found the Lawfords in Florida. In a matter of days, they realised that they had been stranded. Their money was in Britain and Britain was at war. Their assets were frozen. Peter, then 16, took a job parking cars. When he saved enough money for the fare, he went back to Hollywood where he supported himself working as a theatre usher until he began to get film work.[18]

Extra work and bit parts The advent of World War II saw an increase in British war stories and Lawford found himself in demand playing military personnel, albeit usually in uncredited parts. He is briefly seen in Mrs. Miniver (1942) and Eagle Squadron (1942), both times as pilots.[19]

Eagle Squadron is a 1942 American war film directed by Arthur Lubin and starring Robert Stack, Diana Barrymore, John Loder and Nigel Bruce. It was based on a story by C.S. Forester that appeared in Cosmopolitan magazine, and inspired by media reports of the fighting in the Battle of Britain, in particular, the American pilots who volunteered before the United States entered World War II, to fly for the Royal Air Force in the actual Eagle Squadrons. -Wikipeda

Packard vehicles featured innovations, including the modern steering wheel, air-conditioning in a passenger car, and one of the first production 12-cylinder engines, adapted from developing the Liberty L-12 engine used during World War I to power warplanes.

During World War II, Packard produced 55,523 units of the two-stage/two-speed supercharger equipped 1,650 cu in (27.0 L) Merlin V-12s engines under contract with Rolls-Royce. Packard also made the 2,490 cu in (40.8 L) versions of the Liberty L-12 V-12 engine. This updated engine powered United States Navy PT boats.- Wikipeda

These engines were fitted into the P-51 in Inglewood and Los Angeles had many tool and die facilities to produce these engines. Britain did not have the factories build for large scale production of its Rolls Royce engines. It had been limited to low production racing while Germany had been ramping up for years and it takes two years or more to build a motor factory for a specific motor. Paul Schrade was part of this as Joseph Kennedy Sr set it up resigning as Embassaodr to Great Brittian.

After WWII and the atomic bombing of Japan and the final surrender of Japan the Desert In and El Mirador (Guatemala Overlook) hotels in the Cal Neva Arizona area will become CIA airbase hotspots as Princess Elizabeth becomes Queen Elizabeth II and the Special Relationship with Great Britian will work together in the Caribbean nations using modified surplus airplanes Prouty will supply from the Pentagon. Maheu and others with Howard Hughes will convert this into disguised Latin American planes with sometimes English speaking CIA pilots in Guatemala 1954 and elsewhere with CIA figures lke Jack Youngblood, Leroy Young, and others conduct covert warfare. During this time James Donegan my father will meet Glorian Gainey my mother.

During this retreats of all the key players will write white papers on the history of WWI and WII while at Desert Inn. FDR died in office before the Atomic Bomb was dropped but Harry Truman his successor will go to the Desert in. James Donegan will be there and the Windsors as the CIA reviews its past and plans its future.

The Special Relationship and the Birth of Treason

The assertion of Ed Donegan is Robert F. Kennedy was placed in charge of overseeing a careening black operations CIA group funding itself via the front oil companies and other businesses that were created by the CIA and though requisitioned by purchase surplus military equipment was rouge unitary executive profiteering activity.

The problem grew under V.P. Richard Nixon and under JKF he asked Robert F. Kennedy to augment supervision of this assassinations team. His attempts later lead to his death in the city and county of Los Angeles California were the Donegan's from Massachusetts and a friend of the Prouty's were living at the time.

My conspiracy theory backed up by the deceased Jen Moore is that my family had some hidden identities in it, tied to the rise of Nazim and that is the Sound of Music story-line and North Carolina, my mother;s side, and my father in ATSUGI Korean War with E. Howard Hunt and in WWII with the 8ith Army Air Force and the P-51 role in winning WWII in an agreements (like with WWI) to bring US industrial might into the British war efforts.

RFK

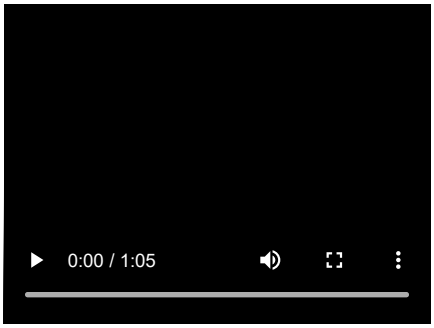
Howard Hughes and Robert Maheu were central to the story of aviation, exploration, and in particular the Battle of Britain. These story-lines in Hollywood propaganda still exist and led the deaths of Marilyn Monroe, JFK, then RFK and Sunny Bono as the real story much of it happening in Los Angeles began to come out by whistle-blowers silenced just before they spoke.

Robert Aime Maheu (October 30, 1917 - August 4, 2008) was an American businessman and lawyer, who worked for the FBI and CIA, and as the chief executive of Nevada operations for the industrialist Howard Hughes. -Wikipedia

My father had a few stories to tell about TWA and Howard Hughes. Ikipeida The first flight from Idlewild (JFK Airport NYC) was on July 1, 1948, with the opening ceremony attended by U.S. President Harry S. Truman and Governor of New York Thomas E. Dewey, Trans World Airlines opened the TWA Flight Center in 1962, designed by Eero Saarinen with a distinctive winged-bird shape. With the demise of TWA in 2001, the terminal remained vacant until 2005 when JetBlue and the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey (PANYNJ) financed the construction of a new 26-gate terminal partly encircling the Saarinen building. Called Terminal 5 (Now T5), the new terminal opened October 22, 2008. T5 is connected to the Saarinen central building through the original passenger departure-arrival tubes that connected the building to the outlying gates. The original Saarinen terminal, also known as the head house, has since been converted into the TWA Hotel.

According to James Paul Donegan the massive tubular ovals were Howard Hughes spreading his DNA across the world according to airline legend. We as a family James Glorian Tom and Ed (myself) were frequently in the airport as us an airline family had traveled oversees mostly to Europe in the 1960's, and 1980s's as a space available airline pilot family flying for free.

No matter what source of documents which historians accounts are based out of most well research books funnel through the lives of Maheu, McCone, USAF General Edward Lansdale, the Cabell brothers, Charles Pearre Cabell (USAF AND Deputy Director of CIA), his brother Earle Cabell mayor Dallas when JFK was shot there, the Dulles John Foster Dulles Secretary of State under JFK and Allen Dulles CIA director fired by JFK , Phillip A. Twombly and George Younglood and CIA and oil interests, CIA and Zapata Petroleum, James Jesus Angleton, Richard M. Bissell Jr. , and the Bush family since Prescott Bush in the US Senate and part of MK-ULTRA helped create the regime change plans and covert mafia groups that later turned onJ JFK and RFK and Ted Gunderson and others.



Robert Maheu And Guy Banister Were Concealers

Maheu was involved in the Indonesia plot staring in earnest in 1958. I Edward Paul Donegan think JKF and RFK were shot over this, tied to Peter Lawford and Birther theory, Obama for Indonesia by the CIA.

The independence minded Sukarno was an Indonesian statesman, orator, revolutionary, and nationalist who was the first president of Indonesia, serving from 1945 to 1967. Sukarno was the leader of the Indonesian struggle for independence from the Dutch colonialists. Wikipedia

Suharto the dictator and love of the CIA was placed into power by the CIA starting with CIA operations Robert Maheu and others began under Vice President Nixon in 1958. This is tied to Obama Jr history and the CIA plans for him in Indonesia.

Indonesia 1958: Nixon, the CIA, and the Secret War By L. Fletcher Prouty is the article on that subject Prouty wrote and was in Prouty's opinion part of the CIA effort to control the world and even assasinate JFK to keep the plans in operation after V.P. Nixon lost the presidential election to JFK in 1960.

Spy Culuture Podcast

> Returning to Maheu, the following year the CIA launched Project HARPSTAR, again targeting Sukarno. They sought to exploit his ‘weakness for Caucasian women’ and got Maheu to source a suitable female. He came up with Florence Horn, a ‘well to do widow’, 35, who was considered ‘highly intelligent and extremely attractive’. Not sure where he found her because women like that are in fairly short supply. She teamed up with a female CIA officer, under cover as her secretary. The idea was to get close to Sukarno, befriend him, maybe sleep with him, and try to ascertain his thinking and future plans.
> They needed to come up with a plausible cover story, and given Florence’s close association with what Maheu called ‘the movie colony’, he suggested they take that path. They came up with the idea of saying she was part of a location scout of Far East locations for a proposed movie version of Journey to the Center of the Earth, and put money into accounts of the Indonesian branch of 20th Century Fox in Jakarta, to provide a funding source for the operation.
> In the event, Florence was unable to get close to Sukarno and gather intelligence on him, largely due to travel conflicts. But 20th Century Fox did produce a film version of Journey to the Center of the Earth, which came out in 1959.

Both Guy Bannister and Robert Mahue (who had a detective agency as well and also was former FBI as Bannister was) were FBI (Former) working for the CIA. Guy Bannister was running guns, grenades, etc., for Brigade 2506 Cuban overthrow run out of New Orleans while Robert Maheu had a similar org to the Guy Bannister front, a private security firm. Maheu came to work for Howard Hughes and Hughes Tool became Hughes Aviation trying to build the successor to the P-38 and P-40 reconnaissance planes. The motor and cam shaft bearings and tooled heavy engines made his company perfect for aviation and he pioneered Jet aircraft. This may or may not mean anything but while in the military I beleive Chauncey Holt was assigned to guard spy planes. That may also have been or instead have been Lee Harvey Oswald in addition to his RADAR operating.

GSF Explorer, formerly USNS Hughes Glomar Explorer (T-AG-193), was a deep-sea drillship platform built for Project Azorian, the secret 1974 effort by the United States Central Intelligence Agency's Special Activities Division to recover the Soviet submarine K-129.[3][4] - Wikipedia

The operation became public in February 1975 when the Los Angeles Times published a story about "Project Jennifer". Other news organizations, including The New York Times, added details. The CIA declined to either confirm or deny the reports, a tactic that became known as the Glomar response and subsequently used to confront all manner of journalistic and public inquiry, including Freedom of Information Act requests.[10] The actual name, Project Azorian, became public only in 2010.

He (Howard Hughes) used the recon planes to film his own movie about those planes in Jet Pilot 1957.

You might believe me or Ted Gunderson (former FBI Special Agent In Charge in Santa Monica and also right hand man to Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy and Whitehouse liaison between the FBI and Johnson Administration of the John F. Kennedy assassination. That the part of this story that I am in that occurs in 1962 (a key time for the McMartin preschool) was part of CIA activity tied to a similar case in Franklin Nebraska about which the documentary and book Conspiracy of Silence were made and that Ted Gunderson and William Colby (for CIA Director) were assassinated over as Jen Moore was (one time Tracy former police officer and later Central Intelligence Agency whistle-blower.)

Ted Gunderson was one of the defenders as law under Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy and love of the Kennedy family. Micheal Levon Kennedy, US Representative Sonny Bono wbo died nearly at the same time as Micheal Lavone Kennedy as was an oversight investigator from Palm Springs Nevada, of Marilyn Monroe close friend of the Kennedy family and though his career branched away from the Kennedy family as LBJ appointees and others affter that moved into top FBI spots in retirement Ted Gunderson went to work in Santa Monica California pursuing his theories McMartin School, Norma Jean, and CIA activities in that area that I and Jen Moore assert at connected to the NWO versus Patriotic Sovereign Citizens from the Kennedy family and others who had lives in media, government, business, and charity.

One year before I enter that preschool I am born in an Inglewood hospital home of the P-51 and F-86 that my father and Paul Schrade were tied to and one year after I entered that preschool JFK was assassinated and later Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated on this same LA County beach strip staying with Manchurian Candidate producer John Frankenheimer telling a story in 1962 similar to my families AND thought to tie to the Kennedy assassination.

Howard Hughes the CIA and Robert Mahue, TWA and the CIA and aviation history were part of the military industrial complex including aviation and propaganda films about it during the Cold War. It was a big deal Sputnik was first into space in 1957 but Hollywood responded with films of Yankee aviation glory.

A LIE TOO BIG TO FAIL - The Real History of the Assassination of ROBERT F. KENNEDY retrieved from Amazon Kindle Edition and copied or modified to here

By Lisa Pease (a Bernie Sanders nutjob in r/l but first tier of 5 people JFK RFK researcher)

The morning of the primary, June 4, 1968, Robert Kennedy slept in. The day before, Kennedy had campaigned in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Long Beach, Watts, San Diego, and Los Angeles again. He had covered 1,200 miles in 12 hours before spending the night at the Malibu beachfront home of John Frankenheimer.

The choice of Frankenheimer would prove ironic. Frankenheimer had directed the film The Manchurian Candidate (1962 film release based on the 1959 novel by Robert Condon), in which a U.S. soldier is captured in Manchuria, hypnotized by Communists, and sent back to the U.S. to be used as a mind-controlled assassin. Before the next 24 hours were over, a consultant to that film would suggest on the radio that Robert Kennedy's assailant had been hypnotically programmed. Shortly before his death, that consultant would also claim to have been the assailant's hypnotist.

In Suite 511 of the Ambassador Hotel, Kennedy and his aides strategized. Senator George McGovern called from South Dakota to give Kennedy an update on the primary results there. McGovern told him that Kennedy had received more votes than Humphrey and McCarthy combined. He had won both the Native Americans' and the farmers votes.

Down the hall, in Suite 516, Pete Hamill, Jack Newfield, Budd Schulberg, Jimmy Breslin, John Frankenheimer and another 25 or so members of the press gathered. "There were no laptops, or cell phones, or BlackBerrys, or cable-television news either. So telephones rang insistently in the suite, were picked up, and names were called in stage whispers," Hamill recalled. Hamill talked for a while to Frankenheimer about his film The Manchurian Candidate.

"Do you think it could happen in what is laughingly called 'real life'?" Hamill asked.

Frankenheimer smiled nervously as he glanced at the suite' door. "Yeah."

In 1956, when President Sukarno of Indonesia came to visit the United States, Scott McLeod of the State Department contacted Maheu and asked him to vet hookers for Sukarno from a security standpoint under the CIA's Project Harpstar. Maheu said this was done to "please" Sukarno, but no doubt this was also an attempt to compromise him with photographs and other material for potential blackmail. The problem was, Sukarno's appetite for women was part of his appeal to a segment of the public in Indonesia. A little over a year later, according to Maheu, he got a call from Sheffield Edwards at CIA, the security offcer who oversaw the Bluebird and ARTICHOKE CIA mind control programs. Edwards wanted Maheu to perform another operation relative to Sukarno. Evidently, the Soviets supplied Sukarno with prostitutes too, but one of them was a KGB agent. Edwards was initially asked to contact Maheu by the CIA's Far East Division.

On June 15 , Jack Hooper told Meier "that he was speaking with Bob Maheu and I was never to mention his name or Bel Air Patrol!" What was so sensitive about the Bel Air Patrol?

The answer came not from Meier's diary but from something Carl McNabb, a former CIA operative, had told me long ago. McNabb had told me that he had learned there was some association prior to the assassination between Maheu and Thane Cesar from the time when Cesar had worked for Maheu at Bel Air Patrol. I could never confirm this, as Bel Air Patrol refused to share its records. But a CIA document (discussing the granting of QKENCHANT clearance to Maheu's son Peter) confirms that Maheu was, in fact, one of the owners of Bel Air Patrol.

Given that he and Hooper owned a number of security firms together, it seemed likely that Hooper too shared the ownership. If there had been a prior connection between Thane Cesar, Hooper and Maheu through Bel Air Patrol, that would have connected the dots for serious researchers very quickly.

It makes sense, then, that Meier would be scared into silence with threats from both Maheu and Hooper. It also might explain why on my first trip to see Meier, Maheu called Meier out of the blue and asked if he needed anything. Meier thought it was so odd that Maheu would have called that day, after not having talked to him for ten years.

On that trip, Meier told me that J. Edgar Hoover had said he knew that Robert Maheu was behind the assassination of Robert Kennedy. In the years after that first trip, I had come to believe Maheu, due to his connections listed earlier, was a credible candidate for the assassination plot's mastermind.

Meier was not the only person to assert that Maheu was behind the assassination. Researcher Steve Gaal gave me another source. His father, a WWII veteran, had been an electrician for the City of Los Angeles, working often at the "Glass House," the nickname for the LAPD's Parker Center. "Sometime between 1977 and 1979," Gaal wrote me:

"Dad and I were talking about the Vietnam War at our house in Highland Park. I said that if RFK had been elected history would have been different. Dad said maybe that was so. Dad then said that he had talked to the detectives at the Glass House and that they had told him Maheu had done it. Dad was a big gossip with hard right wing views. That the detectives talked to Dad is for myself very believable."

Thane Cesar It's hard to overstate the significance of finding a current or future CIA contract agent holding Kennedy's right arm at the moment of the shooting. Recall how one witness felt someone was "holding" Kennedy in place while someone else shot him in the head. But if that was Cesar's only role, why did he, by his own admission, draw his gun?

He claimed he didn't fire it, but he did admit to drawing it. The more reasonable supposition is that Cesar held Kennedy long enough for someone to get off a shot or two to his head, while Cesar fired three shots into Kennedy from behind and to the right-the very position where Cesar was standing.

It makes much less sense that Cesar fired all four or five shots into Kennedy. He would have been much more exposed for a head shot. Cesar's body, however, could have hidden his gun from anyone not looking in that exact spot at the moment while Sirhan was quite obviously pulling focus. Another source for a connection between Thane Cesar and the security arm of the Hughes organization can be found in the book The Assassination Chain. Sybil Leek, one of the authors, saw Cesar in Las Vegas in the company of a "hit man for a Florida group".

[The hit man] always seemed to be near a sturdy, well-built and quite interesting-looking man, but they never spoke. So I asked my Las Vegas friend who this other man was. "He's a professional bodyguard," he replied; and I remarked that I was looking for a bodyguard myself, he would fit the bill perfectly. "You are too late," said my friend. "He is owned by Howard Hughes and his name is Thane Cesar and he is as tough as they Cesar was apparently not the bodyguard for the hit man, however, as Cesar left the room first and the hit man followed. Perhaps he was simply hanging out with a coworker.

I Edward Donegan will show in the chapter Indonesia Kenya Obamas 1958 that under V.P. Nixon and Bissle Jr., Lansdale, and others operations for Kenya were already underway before JFK become president but while he was a US Senator and aware of Joseph Kennedy Sr.'s plans with Great Britain.

THE SUSPICIOUS SECURITY GUARD

https://justiceforrfk.com/the-investigation.html

As the shooting began, security guard Thane Eugene Cesar was standing behind and slightly to the right of Kennedy, in the exact firing position described by the autopsy. Several witnesses observed Cesar drawing his weapon and one witness saw him fire. He was interviewed within hours by the LAPD but they never checked his gun. Cesar claimed he was carrying a .38 caliber revolver that night but he also owned a .22 caliber revolver at the time. Cesar later lied saying he had sold the .22 four months prior to the assassination but the sales receipt proved he actually sold it three months afterwards. He also told the buyer it had been involved in a "police shooting."

Thane Eugene Cesar held extreme right-wing views, supported George Wallace for President and openly admitted hating the Kennedys. At that time, he was working at Lockheed, home of the U-2 spy plane, with a high-level security clearance from the Department of Defense. A week before the assassination, he took a part-time job working evenings as a security guard for Ace Guard Service. Kennedy was assassinated on Cesar's second assignment.

I (Tom Specker) have wanted to do an episode on Robert Maheu for some time, because his life hooks into several topics that we've examined a lot on this podcast. The CIA-Hollywood relationship, the Bay of Pigs and anti-Castro black operations, Watergate, even Howard Hughes. He worked for both the FBI and CIA and his antics even became the inspiration for the original TV series of Mission: Impossible.

Bob was born on October 30th 1917 in Maine, to parents of French Canadian descent, hence the surname Maheu. He studied at the Jesuit College of the Holy Cross before moving on to Georgetown to study law. At this point, in 1941, he was hired by the FBI to work in counter-intelligence, hunting Nazis and so on. He left the FBI in 1947 and founded a company called Dairy Dream Products, presumably selling ice cream. This resulted in bankruptcy in 1952, and so he re-entered government work with the Small Business Administration. In 1954 he was forced to resign from the SBA due to political reasons, which a CIA biography of Maheu says were 'determined to be the result of backing the wrong political party in the election.'

He responded to this setback by setting up his own private detective firm, Robert A Maheu and Associates, in Washington DC. His first steady client was the CIA, whose documents refer to the firm by the acronym RAMA. They used Maheu and others as a cut-outs - contract agents used to make contact with people and carry out missions that the CIA proper cannot be caught talking to or doing. They were stupid enough to write a lot of this down, but many of those documents only became available in recent years via CREST and the JFK disclosures.

In 1955 he was hired by Howard Hughes, and worked for him until 1970, but apparently never met him face to face. They communicated via memo and telephone calls, but Maheu rose to become a close confidante and head of Hughes' Nevada operations. This covers the period when Hughes was hiding out in a hotel in Vegas, calling up the local TV station he owned and telling them to replay his favourite bits of Ice Station Zebra, as we covered in a previous episode. It was also while Hughes was financing CIA operations such as the Glomar Expedition.

Robert Maheu and Watergate

We should also talk about the connection between Robert Maheu and Watergate. And before we do that I will say that if you're going to set up a fast buck disaster tourism submarine business, don't put the suffix 'gate' in the name. It's a recipe for scandal.

In 1974 the CIA undertook several file reviews to find material related to Watergate. The hearings the previous year had led to impeachment hearings in the first months of '74, and the Agency kept getting embarrassed by testimony and media coverage. According to the review guidelines, the purpose was 'to the extent possible to ensure that Agency management is aware of all such material in our files and that there will be no future "surprises" in this regard.'

The list of individuals to use as a basis for the file search included those related to the Watergate break in and the cover-up, so the five burglars, Hunt, Liddy and White House figures like Colson, Erlichmann, Dean and so on. There is also a list of topics including the 1972 election, the Mexican money laundering that financed the Plumbers' operations, the break in at Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office. Then, there's Howard Hughes and Robert Maheu.

But what did they have to do with Watergate? While Maheu's activities for the Agency in many way prefigured what the White House attempted with the Plumbers, he wasn't involved in those operations. Part of this relates to Maheu's past running dirty tricks either to help Nixon during the 50s, or black ops authorised by Nixon when he was vice-president. Another element of this is that Hughes donated large sums to Nixon and his re-election campaign, and Maheu testified at the hearings that he gave $50,000 in cash in a briefcase to Nixon's vice-president Hubert Humphrey.

Then there's the $100,000 given to Nixon personally, not to his campaign. This was also delivered by Maheu, via Nixon's friend Bebe Rebozo. At this point - 1968 - Larry O'Brien worked for the Hughes organisation, having been hired by Maheu. A couple of years later and he was national chairman of the Democratic Party, and the theory is that the break-in was to try to find out if he knew about the dodgy money from Hughes to Nixon.

Then, there was the attempted break-in on the safe of Hank Greenspun, publisher of the Las Vegas Sun. Hank had a large collection of memos between Maheu and Hughes, presumably covering the dodgy money given to Nixon. Around the time the Plumbers were discussing breaking into his safe, someone tried - but failed. This attempted safe-cracking was among the topics included in the CIA's Watergate file review.

So we created the technology and the perfect cover with GLOMAR [Explorer Hughes built ship.] CIA video on Howard Hughes and building ship to find and recover lost Russian missile submarine while claiming to mine the floor of the ocean for metal.

Ed Donegan asserts Howard Hughes and others were working on the CIA Secret Airbase at Licavoli Ranch preparing surplus planes for battle and Jim Donegan may have been there as well trying to break the sound barrier or push to that limit in P-51 H airplanes. He was also in early jet aircraft and secret RECON work.

Frank Wisner, OPC's first Director, planned a counter demonstration. He had gathered his own roster of intellectuals, artists and writers, all anti-communists. OPC would need funding for the plan and Wisner knew just where to get it.

Wisner cabled Dorothy's boss Averell Harriman for help.

Harriman diverted 5 million francs from the coffers of the Marshall Plan and made that available to OPC members in Paris to fund the counter demonstration.

Dorothy was on Harriman's secretarial staff and as such was taking notes, preparing cables, and compiling lists of those persons who would take part in this counter demonstration. It was here, in Paris she reunited with Howard Hunt. He worked for Harriman as a speech writer and film producer although it is more than likely Hunt was actually working for both Harriman's OEEC office and for Wisner's OPC unit.

JM WAVE [Overseen by Attorny General Robert F. Kennedy retrieved from Spartacus Eductional and copied or modified to here

JM WAVE was the Central Intelligence Agency station in Florida. Located south of Miami in a heavily wooded 1,571-acre tract. The numerous buildings were said to belong to Zenith Technological Enterprises.

After the Bay of Pigs disaster President John F. Kennedy created a committee (SGA) charged with overthrowing Castro's government. The SGA, chaired by Robert F. Kennedy (Attorney General), included John McCone (CIA Director), McGeorge Bundy (National Security Adviser), Alexis Johnson (State Department), Roswell Gilpatric (Defence Department), General Lyman Lemnitzer (Joint Chiefs of Staff) and General Maxwell Taylor. Although not officially members, Dean Rusk (Secretary of State) and Robert S. McNamara (Secretary of Defense) also attending meetings.

At a meeting of this committee at the White House on 4th November, 1961, it was decided to call this covert action program for sabotage and subversion against Cuba, Operation Mongoose. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy also decided that General Edward Lansdale (Staff Member of the President's Committee on Military Assistance) should be placed in charge of the operation.

The CIA JM WAVE station in Miami served as operational headquarters for Operation Mongoose. The head of the station was Ted Shackley and over the next few months became very involved in the attempt to overthrow Fidel Castro. One of Lansdale's first decisions was to appoint William Harvey as head of Task Force W. Harvey's brief was to organize a broad range of activities that would help to bring down Castro's government.

By the spring of 1962, JM/WAVE employed more than 200 CIA officers. They in turn ran over 2,200 Cuban agents. JM/WAVE had a navy of over 100 craft, including the 174-foot Rex, that had the latest electronic eqquipment and 40-millimeter and 20-millimeter cannons. The CIA station also had a large number of V-20 Swift craft and access to F-105 Phantoms from nearby Homestead Air Force Base.

William Harvey was ordered to activate an assassination plot against Fidel Castro. This became known as the ZR/RIFLE project. Harvey arranged for David Sanchez Morales to move from Mexico City to join the project based at the JM WAVE station.

In the winter of 1962 Eddie Bayo claimed that two officers in the Red Army based in Cuba wanted to defect to the United States. Bayo added that these men wanted to pass on details about atomic warheads and missiles that were still in Cuba despite the agreement that followed the Cuban Missile Crisis.

Bayo's story was eventually taken up by several members of the anti-Castro community including William Pawley, Gerry P. Hemming, John Martino, Felipe Vidal Santiago and Frank Sturgis. Pawley became convinced that it was vitally important to help get these Soviet officers out of Cuba.

William Pawley contacted Ted Shackley, the head at JM WAVE. Shackley decided to help Pawley organize what became known as Operation Tilt. He also assigned Rip Robertson, a fellow member of the CIA in Miami, to help with the operation. David Sanchez Morales, another CIA agent, also became involved in this attempt to bring out these two Soviet officers.

In June, 1963, a small group, including William Pawley, Eddie Bayo, Rip Robertson, John Martino, and Richard Billings, a journalist working for Life Magazine, secretly arrived in Cuba. They were unsuccessful in their attempts to find these Soviet officers and they were forced to return to Miami. Bayo remained behind and it was rumoured that he had been captured and executed. However, his death was never reported in the Cuban press.

Col Prouty Was A Revealor

Col Prouty wrote Guns of Dallas and Nixon and Indonesia, two truthful and previously unconnected articles on the CIA that are included here.

L. Fletcher Prouty (1917-2001), a retired colonel of the U.S. Air Force, served as the chief of special operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff during the Kennedy years. He was directly in charge of the global system designed to provide military support for the clandestine activities of the CIA. He was the author of JFK: The CIA, Vietnam, and the Plot to Assassinate John F. Kennedy and The Secret Team: The CIA and Its Allies. - Amazon author profile

“Flexible Response” (to Communist influence on nations of the world rather than uniformed combat) was CIA based assassinations and Psychological Warfare studying how to and then influencing popular opinions in foreign nations and included full overthrow operations lending hands to internal combatants of contested countries.

Col. Prouty spent 9 of his 23 year military career in the Pentagon (1955-1964) VP Nixon served from 1952 to 1960 and JFK inaugurated 1961 to 1963:

- 2 years with the Secretary of Defense,
- 2 years with the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and
- 5 years with Headquarters, U.S. Air Force

In 1955 he was appointed the first "Focal Point" officer between the CIA and the Air Force for Clandestine Operations per National Security Council Directive 5412. He was Briefing Officer for the Secretary of Defense (1960-1961), and for the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

At times he would be called to meet with Allen Dulles and John Foster Dulles at their home on highly classified business. He was assigned to attend MKULTRA meetings. In this capacity Col. Prouty would be at the nerve center of the Military-Industrial Complex at a time unequaled in American History. He has written on these subjects, about the JFK assassination, the Cold War period, and Vietnamese warfare, and the existence of a "Secret Team". He backs up his his work with seldom seen or mentioned official documents - some never before released.

Oversight of United States covert operations

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Executive oversight of United States covert operations has been carried out by a series of sub-committees of the National Security Council (NSC).

Birth of covert operations in the Cold War

At the beginning of the Cold War, it was not inevitable that covert operations would become the dominion of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). The National Security Act of 1947 did not explicitly authorize the CIA to conduct covert operations, although Section 102(d)(5) was sufficiently vague to permit abuse. At the very first meetings of the NSC in late 1947, the perceived necessity to "stem the flow of communism" in Western Europe-particularly Italy-by overt and covert "psychological warfare" forced the issue. The actual responsibility for these operations was a hot potato, and when it was decided that the State Department would be in charge, Secretary of State George Marshall sharply opposed it, fearing it would tarnish the international credibility of his department. The upshot was that responsibility for covert operations was passed on to the CIA; this was codified in a NSC policy paper called NSC 4-A,[4] approved in December 1947. NSC 4-A provided the authorization for the intervention of the CIA in the Italian elections of April 1948.[5]

One question and I will get to it early is was there a Col Robert F. Kennedy military officer we didn't know about who with Prouty, Donegan, and others wrote and replicated the story of The Battle of Britain in still ofuscated history.

Paul Schrade was an American trade union activist. While vice president of the United Auto Workers, he was shot in the head during the 1968 assassination of Robert F. Kennedy. Schrade believed that while he was shot by Sirhan Sirhan, Kennedy was shot by a second gunman. Wikipedia

That story was the P-51 and Spitfire fighters with High Altitude Rolls Royce Engines launched early on RADAR signals and flew high with Packard Motors produced Rolls Royce V-16 supercharged aspirated engines that made mincemeat of the Luftwaffe.

Six weeks before his 18th birthday in 1943, Kennedy enlisted in the United States Naval Reserve as a seaman apprentice.[34] He was released from active duty in March 1944 (reportedly with an injury), when he left Milton Academy early to report to the V-12 Navy College Training Program at Harvard College in Cambridge, Massachusetts from March to November 1944. He was relocated to Bates College in Lewiston, Maine from November 1944 to June 1945,[35] where he received a specialized V-12-degree along with 15 others.[36] During the college's winter carnival, Robert built a snow replica of a Navy boat.[37][38] He returned to Harvard in June 1945, completing his post-training requirements in January 1946.

Volume 30 of the Hofstra Law Review is dedicated to members Of the Hofstra community, including four graduates of the Law School, who were violently taken from us during the past year. Of the four Law School graduates, Joni Cesta '91, Neil D. Levin '81, and Glenn J. Winuk '87 were lost in the September 1 lth terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center. Thomas Crane Wales '79 was murdered in Seattle, Washington on October 11, 2001. The Hofstra Law Review presents the following biographical sketches to honor the memory of these four distinguished alumni. Thomas Crane Wales was born in Boston in 1952. He graduated from Milton Academy and Harvard College. Tom earned his law degree from Hofstra University School of Law in 1979 and served as Editor-inChief of Volume 7 of the Hofstra Law Review. He began his legal career by clerking for U.S. District Court Judge Frederick B. Lacey of New Jersey, later moving to Manhattan to work as a litigator at Sullivan & Cromwell.

Notable points about Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas C. Wales, who was fatally shot in his Seattle home Oct. 11, 2001: Wales was born in Boston on June 23, 1952, and grew up in Southborough. He graduated from Milton Academy, a private school in Milton, Mass., in 1970. He had been captain of the football team and shared a room with future congressman Joseph Kennedy, the son of slain Sen. I will leave open he secretly was in the Army Air Corp CIA based version of V12. vThe V-12 Navy College Training Program was designed to supplement the force of commissioned officers in the United States Navy during World War II. Between July 1, 1943, and June 30, 1946, more than 125,000 participants were enrolled in 131 colleges and universities in the United States. Numerous participants attended classes and lectures at their respective colleges and earned completion degrees for their studies. Some even returned from their naval obligations to earn a degree from the colleges where they were previously stationed.

The V-12 program's goal was to produce officers, not unlike the Army Specialized Training Program (ASTP), which sought to turn out more than 200,000 technically trained personnel in such fields as engineering, foreign languages, and medicine. Running from 1942 to 1944, the ASTP recruits were expected but not required to become officers at the end of their training.

The celebrity status of her What's My Line? appearances stretched to her being covered when she covered an important event. Always assigned to the headline-making stories, Kilgallen wrote about Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip's 1957 visit to the United States. Her Journal-American colleague Bill Slocum described the scene:

"Everywhere we went the crowds oohed about the Queen, aahed about the Prince and screamed 'Hiya Dorothy' when they saw Miss Kilgallen. Dorothy was only a little less regal than the royal pair, better dressed than any of her colleagues, or the Queen, and writing the best copy being filed on the trip." The New York Post agreed with the "Dorothy look," describing her as 'tall, slim, unwrinkled, unruffled, fresh-faced, and dressed in a brown suit with a chinchilla beret" while reporting on the queen's visit.

Without doubt, Kilgallen had become as big a celebrity as those she covered. Millions of fans admired her accomplishments. She was a true Renaissance woman in every sense of the word. That Joseph Kennedy Sr and the Hearst publications (out of which Doroth Kilgallen was born as was Joseph Kennedy Sr well connected with) and US Navy and Presidency and Navy Undersecretaries were close to the English royals is well documented by me and others. I assert the deceased Dorothy Kilgallen knew too much about possible children in the USA and that Ted Gunderson knew of this too and McMartin school I was at as did Jen Moore and Tom Donegan my brother. Dorothy Kilgallen, Ted Gunderson, and Jem Moore have all been called Conspiracy theorist and my childhood, and story of my parents is all tied to them and their deaths as they were silenced as was JFK and RFK themselves.

Records from any school I went to show my attendance of those schools was insignificant. If homework can be found from me at those schools it was and can still treated as insignificant. What Jen Moore and I can say though is my parents, the parents of that young child (me) at McMartin school had purposely secret stories told only by whispers inside the Donegan and Gainey households and I think the adults in the room at the time of my childhood had CIA plans underway, my mother had a mixed WWII background part Kutschera given a new life in the USA arranged by the Kennedy family and she married as a result of my father's war hero story him as an Air Force Pilot in Japan working with Howard Hughes, RKO, Joseph Kennedy, and others telling filming a story based on the Special Relationship Joseph Kennedy Sr especially had with Great Britain, Admiral Halsey and the US Navy had as well, and FBI and OSS Propaganda workers were working with, the Von Trapp family sought and got publicity but their secret of Franz Kutschera turned into Glorian Donegan secret of Franz Kutschera.

Massachusetts think my father James Paul Donegan got help from the his St Aidans Church friends in Dorchester. Dorchester, Boston, the Kennedy's and even if I had done well in school that my mother was tied to Franz Kutschera probably meant little non-military support for the Donegan family who would live on after Korean War as a TWA pilot family happy middle class family life in the new jet age and each generation lives better United States of America. Dorchester is a Bostonian neighborhood comprising more than 6 square miles (16 km2) in the City of Boston, Massachusetts, United States.

Jen Moore (murdered, found dead in a hotel after threats to her life) told that story as I do of my mother. If we are to believe Ted Gunderson and others that this was all State Department, CIA, and NWO plans I begin with February 20, 1961 my probably insemination, November 18 1961 my late-night birth in an Inglewood Catholic hospital possibly via a surrogate mother after miscarriages, and in that same area the death of Marlin Monroe (part of the hidden identities story of the CIA and Kennedy's) and later the death of Ted Gunderson investigation the nebula of CIA activities and related deaths.

Now onto my father's military history that included flying with the first and second atomic bombing wings to Japan and in Korea during the Cold War as an interceptor recon pilot. In wartime, the B-29 was capable of flight at altitudes up to 31,850 feet (9,710 m), at speeds of up to 350 mph (560 km/h; 300 kn) (true airspeed). This was its best defense because Japanese fighters could barely reach that altitude, and few could catch the B-29 even if they did attain that altitude. - Google Knowledge Panel

Before I go into high altitude German bombers way up in the air so far up in the air the can be picked up by RADAR I will go into the State Department, Council on Foreign Relations, National Security Council, and other matters the sew all of this together.

After World War II, New Orleans businessman Clay Shaw returned to New Orleans where he became a founder of the International Trade Mart (ITM). From 1947 to his retirement in 1965, Shaw ran the ITM as a managing director.

The International Trade Mart was chartered in 1945, first opened in 1948, and in 1968, merged with International House to form the World Trade Center New Orleans (WTCNO), a private, non-profit organization with a membership of 2,000 corporations and individuals dedicated to improving international trade with New Orleans.

"Like its predecessor organizations, the WTCNO continues to sponsor trade missions to Latin American and Caribbean nations to conduct a variety of educational programs, conferences, seminars, and trade shows and to host dignitaries and other visitors from New Orleans' trade partner nations. Wikipedia

These were along with executive Phillip Twombly the world dealing of Clay Shaw and others the plans against Guatemala, Cuba, Indonesia, and other nations.

New Orleans was a CIA gun running location for the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico nations and regime change and overthrows. In this area Guy Bannister and others operated under J. Edgar Hoover in world espionage operations JFK was trying to stop. Building backstories for sleeper agents the State Department, CIA, OSS, and religious or aide groups were the CIA subversion and overthrow front and these preschool and daycare and orphanages has some hidden identities of CIA tracked and backed families of disavowed offspring raised as bastard otuside their orignal families but given cover identities, passports, and new CIA backed lives in other countries often placed into celebrity or government worker families. To some these missing children were kidnapped or sold into slavery after sometimes traveling to the Geroge H.W. Bush Whitehouse. To others these children were part of CIA covert activities.

According to Winston Churchill the Finest Hour of Britain was the Battle of Britain and the USA USAAF role in should be articulated early in this chapter and the related technologies Paul Schrade and others would speak of.

In this one minute five second video you will see how RFK was driven to the place of his death in Los Angeles that was quite near Marilyn Monroe's death and where JFK had visited in 1961 and how all of this is part of the Manchurian Candidate real life story that explains all these deaths, and supports Ted Gunderson's, Mark Lane's, Penn Jones Jrs, and Col Fletcher Prouty's Super Conspiracy theories about the CIA and their role in these assassinations that are tied to my life, birth, and parents who were James Donegan and Glorian Gainey.

Speaking in the video below is Frank Dutton. Dutton was asked to co-ordinate the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library, and oversaw its Oral History Project. Dutton travelled with Kennedy during much of his 1968 presidential campaign from his 1968 presidential election. He was at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, California when the Senator was shot at the kitchen hotel, and rode in the ambulance with him at Good Samaritan Hospital. Kennedy died the next day. In an interview after he became a lobbyist, he said "After Bobby was shot, the lights went out for ."

SIMI VALLEY

> The Santa Susana Field Laboratory Simi Hills was used for the development of pioneering nuclear reactors and rocket engines beginning in 1948. The site was operated by Atomics International and Rocketdyne (originally both divisions of the North American Aviation company who built the British Spitfire Rolls Royce engin under license as the North American P-51 in Inglewood City Los Angeles County). The Rocketdyne division developed a variety of liquid rocket engines. Rocket engine tests were frequently heard in Simi Valley. The Atomics International division of North American Aviation designed, built and operated the Sodium Reactor Experiment, the first United States nuclear reactor to supply electricity to a public power system.

I Edward Paul Donegan have a lot in common with Ted Gunderson (former FBI Special Agent In Charge) and I have a lot in common with his allegations. At the same time I reported Havana Syndrome in 2008-2009 he was doing so as well and blaming CIA DOJ FBI DHS as I was as well. I did not know of him then. He wrote on the McMartin Schools scandal and I went to it then, in 1962, when The Manchurian Candidate film came out by John Frankenheimer. Were children abused there? Can you tell at an early age it is asked in Manchurian Candidate by Dr. Lo who is a stable personality and can it be made (by inflicting injurious activities) to become unstable, perhaps to fight or flight, flight including suicide?

These same child abuse scandals tie to Jen Moore Franklin Nebraska Conspiracy of Silence with Ted Gunderson and William Colby working together and with John Decamp while facing death threats if they continued their work.

I also remember being teamed with a black person along this time the first black person I saw and now I suspect this is tied to Birther and Barrack Obama Jr. and the CIA activities of this time. I will have to show most of that later and elsewhere because if that has a chance the P-51 part of the story must be understood and foundation for that later conspiracy theory.

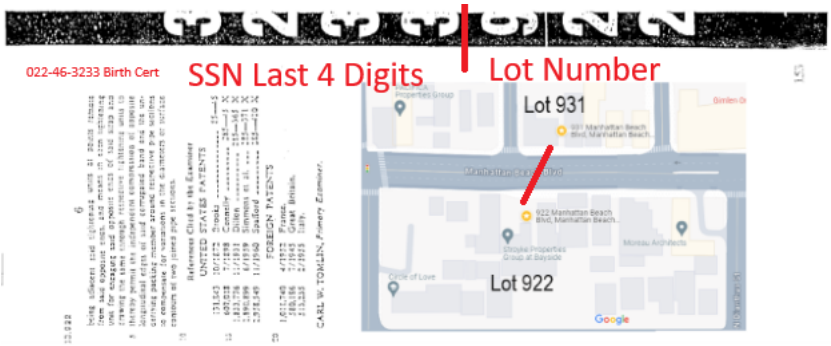
I believe from my parents and my own memories at St Joseph's Inglewood hospital I was being given EEGs and other testing at this time.

My association to Ted Gunderson could be described as indirect but with Col Fletcher Prouty who also held the views about the CIA and FBI and the assassination of JFK it was direct. I knew Prouty as a family freind, he as a Donegan family close friend.

High altitude bombers including with pressurized cockpits were in use in WWII and after the Battle of France was over German bombers and fighters crossed the English Channel with ease.



Super Marine fighters from England like the Spitfire were fighting them off but limited in number and had little advanced warning until ground based radar. When they were airborn the US P-51 planes joining them (on a voluntary basis at first) had a hard time climbing to altitude with the engines they had. It was bad enough the v12s were not supercharged from basic performance standpoint. But the problem was worse at high altitude when air breathing engines lacked the oxygen to develop combustion. Like compressors on Turbojets the superchargers of the Merlin Spitfire by Rolls

Royce engines licensed to Packard Motors in Inglewood California helped turn the corner in WWII. My father and my birth are part of that story as was my mother's hidden identity.

This document The Special Relationship and the Birth of Treason focuses on the Robert F. Kennedy assassination and a story fictionalized in 1957 by Hollywood and the Kennedy's that had been pushed onto JFK by Averal Harriman, Prescott and George H.W. Bush, Nixon, Ford, and other Rockefeller Republicans. In the middle of the story I go into in my books not in this chapter or a pamphlet using this chapter is the assassination of JFK in 1963 tied to the CIA creation of the Obama family also tied to JFK and my birth in Inglewood California and the hidden identities tied to that.

I don't want to focus on fictionalized films especially early in this chapter and or pamphlet this chapter is included in. But I must show how OSS Propaganda was in use for the military industrial complex and Dorothy Killgallen, Howard Hughes, Joseph Kennedy Sr., RKO, Disney, and others were a part of it that fits all together into Truther.

https://spartacus-educational.com/JFKpataky.htm In June, 1964, Pataky went on a trip paid for by Twentieth Century-Fox who used it to publicize three of its films:1) The Sound of Music, 2)The Agony and the Ecstasy and 3) Those Magnificent Men in Their Flying Machines. On the trip Pataki\y met and began a relationship with fellow journalist, Dorothy Kilgallen. This relationship was kept a secret. In her book, Kilgallen (1979), Lee Israel gives Pataky the name of "Out-of-Towner". Apparently Pataky went up to Kilgallen and asked her if she was Clare Booth Luce.

Outlined in Those Magnificent Men and their Flying Machines are the still-persisting hazards of modern flying despite today's advanced technology, as a night-time civilian flight across the English Channel is cancelled owing to heavy fog. One of the delayed passengers (Skelton) gets the idea of learning to fly under his own power, perpetuating man's pioneering spirit.

Coming into Paris, Ponticelli's plane catches fire, and Newton detours to rescue him as Mays is landing, winning for Britain. Mays recognises Newton's heroism and shares the glory and the prize with him, while Ponticelli agrees to give up flying for his family. Their kiss is interrupted by a strange noise: they and the others at the field look up to see a flyover by six English Electric Lightning jet fighters, as the time period leaps forward to the "present" (1965).

Their kiss is interrupted by a strange noise: they and the others at the field look up to see a flyover by six English Electric Lightning jet fighters, as the time period leaps forward to the "present" (1965).

The English Electric Lightning is a British fighter aircraft (interceptor) that served as an interceptor during the 1960s, the 1970s and into the late 1980s. It was capable of a top speed of above Mach 2. The Lightning was designed, developed, and manufactured by English Electric. After EE merged with other aircraft manufacturers to form the British Aircraft Corporation it was marketed as the BAC Lightning. It was operated by the Royal Air Force (RAF), the Kuwait Air Force (KAF), and the Royal Saudi Air Force (RSAF).

A unique feature of the Lightning's design is the vertical, staggered configuration of its two Rolls-Royce Avon turbojet engines within the fuselage. The Lightning was designed and developed as an interceptor to defend the airfields of the British "V bomber" strategic nuclear force[.

I Edward Donegan assert in the 1920's Joseph Kennedy Sr and FDR and Admiral Halsey got some Windsor bastard children into the USA who knew secretly of their history. Glorian Gainey was one of them and Norma Jean was another. Glorian Gainey was my mother and like Norma Jean had an orphaning experience and possible fake parents.

The need for this was Albert of York had a genetic defect and Windsor out-of-wedlocks including with Maria Kutschera impregnated in early 1926 and giving birth in the USA late in 1926 in the USA helped by Peter Lawford in Los Angeles is my maternal history. That is also the Sound of Music later by 20th Century Fox but the diary and earlier versions of play and film productions are much closer to the truth.

The paternal peice of this is my father is from a Roman Catholic family near the Kennedy home town and likely knew the Kennedy's who, when the Donegan's lost their money in the depression, the Kennedy's pulled some strings for getting my non-college educated railroad worker into the US Army Air Corp and Pennsylvania based reconnaissance school.

That led into the historic P-51 role of WWII, the Battle of Britain, and finally the atomic bombing of Japan twice my father was also a part of.

It seems during re-enacting much of this for Howard Hughes and Joseph Kennedy Sr RKO films for Jet Pilot 1957 release my father met my mother and at that time the FBI and CIA informed him she had a past, Franz Kutschera and Himmler worked together with the Von Trapp children (Agatha Whitehead and Captain Von Trapp) with Nazi propaganda. Jim and Glorian US born and patriotic in WWII in every way had nothing to hide they were told at least by some but it does seem they were pressured by the OSS CIA and Vatican to allow additional secret family lines to be test bred and I assert one was Barrack Obama Jr. and the CIA and others hare hiding that.

This is not necessary to understand Paul Schrade and the assassination of RFK but it does further explain that and also then explains the assassination of JFK and it being tied to the OSS CIA Nixon 1958 plans for Indonesia this was the fabricfabric of.

My father James Paul Donegan who lived in the area of the Kennedy family and a Roman Catholic appears to have had some friends with some pull and seemingly became a test-pilot at the Inglewood plant of the P-51 and became a pilot as well as the war grew in scale. He was part of atomic testing blasts and the atomic bombing of Japan as well as P-51 missions over Europe durung WWII and later Korea during the Korean War likely with E. Howard Hunt at ATSUGI. In that time he seems have met while on set of an RKO Howard Hughes film Glorian as she like Duke Edward King Edward VIII were getting post-war recreations of the Battle of Brittian. This became Jet Pilot 1957. As for Sound of Music that expalins how Kutschera Windsor children arrive in the mid 1920's from biological mohter Maria Kutschera that King Edward VIII had been "too close to."

I assert that for observers in the 1950's Jet Pilot was filmed at the most modern radar edge of Allies Airspace, then ATSUGI Japan where Lee Harey Oswald showed recon and airspace monitoring as a radar operation and recon and fighter planes were showed off showing who in today's battleground is was a refresher course to defending England in the Battle of Brittain of WWII. Further, that this refresher course had Peter Lawford of the movies, RKO, Howard Hughes, TWA, Robert Maheu and James and Glorian Donegan of Manhattan Beach and the Fat Boy atomic bomb tests and p-51 and F86 recon planes history also told by another 1960's set movie Rocky Horror Picture Show. As with everything here more in the rest of the books but enough is here to.

The Rolls-Royce R is a British aero engine that was designed and built specifically for air racing purposes by Rolls-Royce Limited. Nineteen R engines were assembled in a limited production run between 1929 and 1931. Developed from the Rolls-Royce Buzzard, it was a 37-litre (2,240 cu in) capacity, supercharged V-12 capable of producing just under 2,800 horsepower (2,090 kW), and weighed 1,640 pounds (770 kg). Intensive factory testing revealed mechanical failures which were remedied by redesigning the components, greatly improving reliability.

The R was used with great success in the Schneider Trophy seaplane competitions held in England in 1929 and 1931. Shortly after the 1931 competition, an R engine using a special fuel blend powered the winning Supermarine S.6B aircraft to a new airspeed record of over 400 miles per hour (640 km/h). Continuing through the 1930s, both new and used R engines were used to achieve various land and water speed records by such racing personalities as Sir Henry Segrave, Sir Malcolm Campbell and his son Donald, the last record being set in 1939. A final R-powered water speed record attempt by Donald Campbell in 1951 was unsuccessful.

The R was a physically imposing engine designed by a team led by Ernest Hives and including Cyril Lovesey, Arthur Rowledge and Henry Royce. The R shared the Buzzard's bore, stroke and capacity, and used the same 60-degree V-12 layout. A new single-stage, double-sided supercharger impeller was designed along with revised cylinders and strengthened connecting rods.[6] The wet-liner cylinder blocks,[nb 3] crankcase and propeller reduction gear castings were produced from "R.R 50" aluminium alloy;[7] and because of the short life expectancy of these engines, forged aluminium was used to replace bronze and steel in many parts.

The experience gained by Rolls-Royce and Supermarine designers from the R engine was invaluable in the subsequent development of the Rolls-Royce Merlin engine and the Spitfire. A de-rated R engine, known as the Griffon, was tested in 1933, but it was not directly related to the production Rolls-Royce Griffon of 1939, of the same exact bore/stroke and resultant displacement figures as the "R" design. Three examples of the R engine are on public display in British museums as of 2014. wikipedia

Better engine performance at altitude

Critical altitude

Turbochargers increase a piston engine's critical altitude, which is the maximum altitude at which an engine can maintain its full, rated horsepower. Because the maximum horsepower of a normally aspirated (nonturbocharged) engine is achieved in standard, sea level conditions, sea level is this engine's critical altitude. However, since most airports are above sea level, normally aspirated engines-which account for the vast majority of piston aircraft engines including those on almost all trainers-don't produce their full, rated power on takeoff. This is why aircraft performance charts give performance data for various pressure altitudes.

A turbocharger compresses the engine's intake air to maintain sea-level takeoff manifold pressure and full, rated power up to the engine's critical altitude. This altitude depends on the individual engine/turbocharger installation. But when the aircraft climbs above its critical altitude, the manifold pressure and resulting power decrease, just as a normally aspirated engine does when climbing away from sea level.

At the outbreak of World War Two, the British aviation industry expanded greatly. There was great need for the Rolls-Royce Merlin engine with shadow factories being established in Crewe, Manchester, and Glasgow. This was not enough to meet increasing demand with the British government looking to expand production using U.S. manufacturers. An agreement was reached between Rolls-Royce and the Packard Motor Car Company in September 1940 to manufacture the Merlin under license, with a $130,000,000 order being placed. The first Packard-built engine, designated V-1650-1, ran in August 1941.

Robert F. Kennedy’s namesake son has uncovered the identity of the slain politician’s true assassin! The National ENQUIRER has learned RFK Jr. has discovered evidence a security guard at Los Angeles’ Ambassador hotel fired the kill shot into the back of his father’s head at point-blank range. RFK Jr. believes Thane Eugene Cesar and his father’s convicted assassin, Sirhan Sirhan, doubled up as a hit squad - and he’s demanding the LAPD open a new probe into the decades-old cover-up.

“Compelling evidence suggests that Cesar murdered my father,” RFK Jr. wrote on Instagram. “Police have never seriously investigated Cesar’s role in my father’s killing.” Read more at:https://www.magzter.com/stories/Celebrity/National-Enquirer/RFK-JR-Hunts-Down-His-Dads-Real-Killer

As the shooting began, security guard Thane Eugene Cesar was standing behind and slightly to the right of Kennedy, in the exact firing position described by the autopsy. Several witnesses observed Cesar drawing his weapon and one witness saw him fire. He was interviewed within hours by the LAPD but they never checked his gun. Cesar claimed he was carrying a .38 caliber revolver that night but he also owned a .22 caliber revolver at the time. Cesar later lied saying he had sold the .22 four months prior to the assassination but the sales receipt proved he actually sold it three months afterwards. He also told the buyer it had been involved in a "police shooting."

Thane Eugene Cesar held extreme right-wing views, supported George Wallace for President and openly admitted hating the Kennedys. At that time, he was working at Lockheed, home of the U-2 spy plane, with a high-level security clearance from the Department of Defense. A week before the assassination, he took a part-time job working evenings as a security guard for Ace Guard Service. Kennedy was assassinated on Cesar's second assignment.

A POSSIBLE HIGH-LEVEL CONSIIRATOR

Authors David Talbot ("Brothers: The Hidden History of the Kennedy Years") and Lisa Pease ("A Lie Too Big to Foil") hove identified Howard Hughes' right-hand man, former FBI agent, and the CIA's Castro assassination plot coordinator, Robert Maheu, as the likely planner of Robert Kennedy's assassination. Multiple government documents prove that Maheu worked for the CIA in assassination plots and other covert activities in the 1960s. Maheu also admitted to Talbot that he hated the Kennedys.

Maheu's principal accuser is former top Howard Hughes executive and Maheu associate, John Meier. Meier knew that Thane Eugene Cesar was an employee of Maheu's private security firm that performed top secret activities for the CIA. Meier also described suspicious conversations he heard between Maheu and Donald Nixon, Richard Nixon's brother, shortly before and after the assassination and wrote about them in his diary (partially published in Gerald Bellett's "Age of Secrets"). Hughes had long been a major financial supporter of Richard Nixon and a close collaborator with the CIA. Meier, now 88, has continued to try to get his information about the case out to the public. https://justiceforrfk.com/the-investigation.html

NYT - After dropping out of Yale University in his junior year, Mr. Schrade headed to Southern California, where he got a job at North American Aviation, an aerospace company that was later known as North American Rockwell and Rockwell International.

He became a union activist, rising in the ranks of the United Auto Workers to become president of the union local at the Rockwell plant in Los Angeles before moving to Detroit in the mid-1950s as the assistant to Walter Reuther, the union’s president.

"In a speech to college students in Ohio in 1959, Mr. Schrade pointed to labor’s role in fighting communism and building the American dream: “We have the brains, we have manpower and we have the natural resources and scientific ability to provide ourselves with both plenty and freedom.”

Mr. Reuther, his patron, died in plane carsh in 1970.

Walter Philip Reuther (/ˈruːθər/; September 1, 1907 - May 9, 1970) was an American leader of organized labor and civil rights activist who built the United Automobile Workers (UAW) into one of the most progressive labor unions in American history.[1] He saw labor movements not as narrow special interest groups but as instruments to advance social justice and human rights in democratic societies.[1] He leveraged the UAW's resources and influence to advocate for workers' rights, civil rights, women's rights, universal health care, public education, affordable housing, environmental stewardship and nuclear nonproliferation around the world.[1] He believed in Swedish-style social democracy and societal change through nonviolent civil disobedience.[2][3] He cofounded the AFL-CIO in 1955 with George Meany.[4] He survived two attempted assassinations, including one at home where he was struck by a 12-gauge shotgun blast fired through his kitchen window.[5] He was the fourth and longest serving president of the UAW, serving from 1946 until his death in 1970.[6]

As the leader of five million autoworkers, including retirees and their families,[7] Reuther was influential inside the Democratic Party.[8] Following the Bay of Pigs in 1961, President John F. Kennedy sent Reuther to Cuba to negotiate a prisoner exchange with Fidel Castro.[9] He was instrumental in spearheading the creation of the Peace Corps[10][11][12] and in marshaling support for the Civil Rights Act of 1964,[13][14] the Voting Rights Act of 1965,[15] Medicare and Medicaid,[16] and the Fair Housing Act.[14] He met weekly in 1964 and 1965 with President Lyndon B. Johnson at the White House to discuss policies and legislation for the Great Society and War on Poverty.[17] The Republican Party was wary of Reuther, leading presidential candidate Richard Nixon to say about John F. Kennedy during the 1960 election, "I can think of nothing so detrimental to this nation than for any President to owe his election to, and therefore be a captive of, a political boss like Walter Reuther."[18] Conservative politician Barry Goldwater declared that Reuther "was more dangerous to our country than Sputnik or anything Soviet Russia might do."

A powerful ally of Martin Luther King Jr. and the civil rights movement,[20] Reuther marched with King in Detroit, Selma,[21] Birmingham,[22] Montgomery,[23] and Jackson.[24][25] When King and others including children were jailed in Birmingham, Alabama, and King authored his famous Letter from Birmingham Jail, Reuther arranged $160,000 for the protestors' release.[26] He also helped organize and finance the March on Washington on August 28, 1963, delivering remarks from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial shortly before King gave his historic "I Have a Dream" speech on the National Mall.[22][27] An early supporter of Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers, he asked Robert F. Kennedy to visit and support Chavez.[28] He served on the board of directors for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP)[29] and was one of the founders of Americans for Democratic Action.[30] A lifetime environmentalist, Reuther played a critical role in funding and organizing the first Earth Day on April 22, 1970.[31] According to Denis Hayes, the principal national organizer of the first Earth Day, "Without the UAW, the first Earth Day would have likely flopped!"[31] -

On May 9, 1970, Walter Reuther, his wife May, architect Oscar Stonorov, Reuther's bodyguard William Wolfman, pilot George O. Evans and co-pilot Joseph U. Karaffa were killed when their chartered Learjet 23 crashed in flames at 9:33 p.m. Eastern Time. The plane, arriving from Detroit in rain and fog, was on final approach to Pellston Regional Airport in Pellston, Michigan, near the UAW's recreational and educational facility at Black Lake, Michigan.[153][154] The National Transportation Safety Board discovered that the plane's altimeter was missing parts, some incorrect parts were installed, and one of its parts had been installed upside down,[155] leading some to speculate that Reuther may have been murdered.[142] Reuther had been subjected earlier to two attempted assassinations and a similar near-crash in a small plane in 1969.

Journalist Michael Parenti wrote, "Reuther's demise appears as part of a truncation of liberal and radical leadership that included the deaths of four national figures: President John Kennedy, Malcolm X, Martin Luther King, and Senator Robert Kennedy."[156]WIkipedia

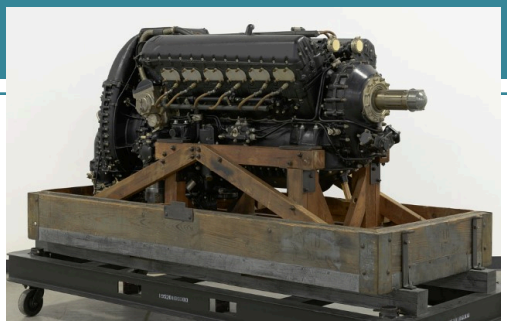
Packard (Rolls-Royce) Merlin V-1650-7, V-12 Engine of WWII and a Ford Motor Liberty 12 of WWI



V12 Aircraft Engines (various sources)

WWI Aviation - The Liberty L-12 is an American water-cooled 45° V-12 aircraft engine displacing 1,649 cubic inches (27 L) and making 400 hp (300 kW) designed for a high power-to-weight ratio and ease of mass production. It saw wide use in aero applications, and, once marinized, in marine use both in racing and runabout boats.

A single bank 6-cylinder version, the Liberty L-6, and V-8, the Liberty L-8, were derived from the Liberty L-12. It was succeeded by the Packard 1A-2500.

The Packard V-1650 Merlin is a version of the Rolls-Royce Merlin (Birds of Prey Names for British Fighters) Spitfire aircraft engine, produced under license in the United States by the Packard Motor Car Company. The engine was licensed to expand production of the Rolls-Royce Merlin for British use. The engine also filled a gap in the U.S. at a time when similarly powered American-made engines were not available.

The first V-1650s, with a one-stage supercharger, equivalent to the Merlin XX, were used in the P-40F Kittyhawk fighter and in Canadian-built Hawker Hurricanes. Later versions based on the Merlin 60 series included a more advanced two-stage supercharger for improved performance at high altitudes. It found its most notable application in the North American P-51 Mustang fighter, improving the aircraft's performance so it could escort Allied heavy bombers from Britain to Germany and back.

The first American model was a version of the Mark XX, designated the V-1650-1 by the American military and the Packard Merlin 28 by the British. This engine used a single-stage, two-speed supercharger, the gear changing mechanism of which originally came from a French Farman patent license. The Merlin 28 was used for the Avro Lancaster bomber. The USAAF V-1650-1 version of this engine was used in the Curtiss P-40Fs. The initial Packard modifications to this engine changed the main crankshaft bearings from a copper-lead alloy to a silver-lead combination and featured indium plating. This had been developed by General Motors' Pontiac Division to prevent corrosion, which was possible with lubricating oils that were used at that time. The bearing coating also improved the break-in (running-in) and load-carrying abilities of the surface.[citation needed]

In answer to a request from the British Air Ministry for a high-altitude Merlin for the pressurised Wellington VI high-altitude bomber, a Rolls-Royce team under the direction of Stanley Hooker developed a Merlin with two-stage supercharging, which became the Merlin 60-series. The first 60-series engine ran in March 1941, and was first flown in July the same year.[4] When only 63 examples of the otherwise-cancelled Wellington VI were produced, these engines were instead introduced on the Spitfire IX as the Merlin 61.

This model was later produced by Packard as the V-1650-3 and became known as the "high altitude" Merlin destined for the P-51, the first two-stage Merlin-Mustang conversion flying with a Merlin 61[5] as the Mustang X in October 1942, the production V-1650-3 engined P-51B (Mustang III) entering service in 1943. The two-speed, two-stage supercharger section of the two-stage Merlins and V-1650-3 featured two separate impellers on the same shaft that were normally driven through a gear train at a ratio of 6.391:1. A hydraulic gear change arrangement of oil-operated clutches could be engaged by an electric solenoid to increase this ratio to 8.095:1 in high speed blower position.[citation needed]

Packard Motors 1942-1945 In 1942, the Packard Motor Car Company converted to 100% war production.[41] During World War II, Packard again built airplane engines, licensing the Merlin engine from Rolls-Royce as the V-1650, which powered the P-51 Mustang fighter, ironically known as the "Cadillac of the Skies" by GIs in WWII.[42][43] Packard also built 1350-, 1400-, and 1500-hp V-12 marine engines for American PT boats (each boat used three) and some of Britain's patrol boats. Packard ranked 18th among United States corporations in the value of wartime production contracts.[44] The end Studebaker-Packard retired the Packard marque in 1959. In 1962, "Packard" was dropped off the corporation's name at a time when it was introducing the all-new Avanti.

By the end of the war in Europe, Packard Motor Car Company had produced over 55,000 combat engines. Sales in 1944 were $455,118,600. By May 6, 1945, Packard had a backlog on war orders of $568,000,000.

1946-1956 Postwar use - In the United States many war surplus engines and airframes were sold relatively cheaply - two of the most popular items were North American P-51 Mustangs and Packard V-1650 Merlin engines, several of which were "souped up" and modified for air racing in the Bendix Trophy, the Cleveland Air Races,[7] and the Thompson Trophy. Many of these engines remain heavily used to this day in Drag Racing, Hydroplane racing, and Land Speed Racing at places like the Bonneville Salt Flats. The Mynarski Lancaster flown by the Canadian Warplane Heritage Museum in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, one of only two Lancasters flying in the world, uses four Packard Merlin engines.

Work continues on increasing the power output of the Merlin for the Unlimited Class racers at the Reno Air Races. Innovations, such as the use of Allison V-1710 connecting rods and the replacement of the intercooler with ADI (Anti-Detonation Injection) (50% Distilled Water and 50% Methanol), nearly identical in chemical composition to the Luftwaffe's wartime MW 50 system, and similar to the water injection system used on Pratt & Whitney engines during World War II, have allowed great increases in power output.[9][10] Many of the fastest Unlimited racers increase Merlin manifold pressures as high as 145 inHg (56.6 psi, 4.8 atm) to obtain up to 2,835 kW (3,800 horsepower), achieving Mustang speeds up to 490 mph.

The P-51H Mustang by Curtis Fowles, Mustangs Mustangs In July of 1943, U.S. Army approved a contract with North American Aviation to design and build a lightweight P-51. Designated NA-105, 5 aircraft were to be built and tested. Edgar Schmued, chief of design at NAA, began this design early in 1943. He, in February of 1943, left the U.S. on a two month trip to England. He was to visit the Supermarine factory and the Rolls Royce factory to work on his lightweight project.

Rolls Royce had designed a new version of the Merlin, the RM.14.SM, which was proposed to increase the manifold pressure to 120 (from 67 max) and thus improve horsepower to 2,200. Schmued was very eager to use this powerplant. The new Merlin was not heavier than the earlier models. Schmued visited with the engineers at Rolls Royce and they answered his many questions. Schmued left the Rolls Royce factory very satisfied with their cooperation.

Brittish fighters were lighter than U.S. fighters. Schmued ask for detailed weight statements from Supermarine on the Spitfire. Schmued wanted to know why the Spitfires were so much lighter than the P-51. Supermairne did not have such data on the Spitfire, so they started weighing all the parts they could get a hold of and made a report for Schmued. The Brittish had design standards that were not as strict in some areas of design as the U.S. Landing gear, angle of attack and side engine design loads were higher in the U.S.

When Schmued returned, they began a new design of the P-51 Mustang that used Brittish design loads. They shaved weight on any part that could yield. They were able to reduce the empty weight of the P-51 by 600 pounds. This would translate into more performance.

P-51H-10NA_26t.jpgP-51H-10NA_9t.jpgP-51H-5NA_1t.jpgP-51H-5NA_2t.jpg The lightweight prototypes were designated XP-51F, XP-51G and XP-51J. After testing of these prototypes, the production version, NA-126 P-51H, was closest to the XP-51F. The project began in April of 1944 and the contract for 1,000 P-51Hs was approved on June 30, 1944.

The H model was a completely new design. Yes it looks like a P-51, but you can tell there is something not the same. I remember as a teenager when I saw my first P-51H in person. I asked my dad, "that's a Mustang ... isn't it?" as I looked at it and tilted my head slightly. He looked and my uncle looked, and then they paused and decided that yes it was a mustang and it must be the later H model (they were seldom stumped when I asked them aircraft ID questions).

Almost all the parts from the D line were not usable in the P-51H. This was the first production P-51 with a complete overhaul. The wing did not have that famous leading edge kink in it. The landing gear was visibly smaller. The profile shows new lines with a taller tail (later versions). The fuselage was a bit more slender and the length was increased to 33.33 feet. The wingspan stayed the same. The belly scoop inlet profile was not angled any longer but was now square again like the first P-51s. The chin scoop for the engine was decreased in size.

The wheels now had disk brakes. The oil cooler was moved from inside the belly scoop to in front of the oil tank ahead of the firewall. This eliminated the oil lines that ran from the engine to the old location in the scoop. The oil was now cooled by a heat exhanger mounted next to the engine intercooler.

The engine mounts were incorporated into the structural engine cradle, thus saving weight. The engine would not be the newer RS.14.SM Merlin as in some of the lightweight prototypes. The Rolls Royce Merlin V-1650-9 was chosen. Take-off horsepower was actually down from the -7 series to 1,380. But, the new -9 Merlin used water/alcohol injection and was able to up the war emergency power to 2,200 at 10,200 feet. This was the fastest production P-51 clocking 487 mph at 25,000 feet.

The propeller of the P-51H was the Aeroproducts 11'1" 4-blade Unimatic otherwise know as the "H prop". This prop is even lighter than the K model Aeroproducts but it looks much different. The blades are wider and keep approx. the same width almost the whole blade. The tips are rounded.

Armament was the same as in the P-51D. Removable ammo boxes and a redesign of the ammo doors were added. This saved time reloading and must have eased up on the laminar flow killing scratches and scuffs on the wings. The earlier models had to be loaded by hand out of portable ammo boxes. The top surfaces of the wings were taking a huge beating and disrupting the true laminar flow of the wing surface. I honestly doubt the crews in the field either knew or cared much about that.

Fuel in the fuselage tank was decreased to 55 gallons max. The fuselage skins were lighter and thinner, made from a new alloy. The cockpit panel was improved and simplified. The canopy was redesigned and the "hump" moved further forward. The pilot sat higher for a better angle using the gunsight.

The first P-51H flew on Feb 3, 1945 with Bob Chilton at the controls. This P-51H-1NA, 44-64160 was wrecked three days later when the prop failed. The USAAF flew test flights on P-51H 44-64161 from Apr 4-14, 1945 by pilot Major J. D. Onerem. Production continued and 221 P-51Hs were delivered by July 30 and 370 by VJ Day in early September.

Contrary to what many believe, the P-51H did not start out as "the tall tail Mustang". The first 20 P-51H-1NA were built with the lower D model height tail. These units were later retrofitted with the taller tail. The taller tail and smaller fuselage fuel tank of 55 gallons, rid the P-51 of the annoying directional stability problem.

Production was cut short by the end of the war. All P-51H versions were built at Inglewood, Ca. The Dallas, Tx version of the P-51H, NA-129 P-51L with the newest Merlin, the V-1650-11, would not finish any models. The last P-51 off the Texas production line was an NA-124 order which included the newer P-51M which was an improved P-51D-30 with the V-1650-9A Merlin and a Hamilton Standard Prop. The -9A Merlin did not have water injection. One production M model was completed. The 63 partially built units were scrapped.

The last P-15H-10NA rolled out of the Inglewood factory in November of 1945. In all, a total of 555 P-51H models were completed: 20 P-51H-1NA, 280 P-51H-5NA and 255 P-51H-10NA were finished and accepted in the USAAF.

Even though some units in the pacific received the P-51H before VJ Day, they did not see any action. Ironically, when the start of the the Korea War broke out, the earlier version of the P-51, the P-51D was chosen to do the fighting, not the P-51H. In the years to follow, the H was used in many Air National Guard units around the U.S.

Only 5 P-51Hs survived, 2 are display quality only, 2 are airworthy and the last is in restoration to be airworthy. One of the XP-51G prototypes does exist and is in a long term restoration with John Morgan in California. This G model was saved by chance and fast action while on its way to the scrapper.

The Tempest is a play by William Shakespeare, probably written in 1610-1611, and thought to be one of the last plays that he wrote alone. After the first scene, which takes place on a ship at sea during a tempest, the rest of the story is set on a remote island, where Prospero, a complex and contradictory character, lives with his daughter Miranda, and his two servants: Caliban, a savage monster figure, and Ariel, an airy spirit. The play contains music and songs that evoke the spirit of enchantment on the island. It explores many themes, including magic, betrayal, revenge, and family. -Wikipedia

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.1

Alonso, King of Naples.
Sebastian, his brother.
Prospero, the right Duke of Milan.
Antonio, his brother, the usurping Duke of Milan.
Ferdinand, son to the King of Naples.
Gonzalo, an honest old Counsellor.
Caliban, a savage and deformed Slave.

Colonization - Theme Analysis

During the time when The Tempest was written and first performed, both Shakespeare and his audiences would have been very interested in the efforts of English and other European settlers to colonize distant lands around the globe. The Tempest explores the complex and problematic relationship between the European colonizer and the native colonized peoples through the relationship between Prospero and Caliban. Prospero views Caliban as a lesser being than himself. As such, Prospero believes that Caliban should be grateful to him for educating Caliban and lifting him out of "savagery." It simply does not occur to Prospero that he has stolen rulership of the island from Caliban, because Prospero can't imagine Caliban as being fit to rule anything. In contrast, Caliban soon realizes that Prospero views him as a second-class citizen fit only to serve and that by giving up his rulership of the island in return for his education, he has allowed himself to be robbed. As a result, Caliban turns bitter and violent, which only reinforces Prospero's view of him as a "savage." Shakespeare uses Prospero and Caliban's relationship to show how the misunderstandings between the colonizer and the colonized lead to hatred and conflict, with each side thinking that the other is at fault.

In addition to the relationship between the colonizer and colonized, The Tempest also explores the fears and opportunities that colonization creates. Exposure to new and different peoples leads to racism and intolerance, as seen when Sebastian criticizes Alonso for allowing his daughter to marry an African. Exploration and colonization led directly to slavery and the conquering of native peoples.

Today when you factor in the interest on the national debt from past wars and total defense expenditures the United States spends almost 40% of its federal budget on the military. It accounts for over 46% of total world arms spending. Before World War II it spent almost nothing on defense and hardly anyone paid any income taxes. You can't have big wars without big government. Such big expenditures are now threatening to harm the national economy. How did this situation come to be?

An important read cover-to-cover because the USA teamed with British Colonialsim when the Nazis (though defeated) had freed many colonial ruled nations world-wide

Once the war ended, both the United States and Soviet Union spent the next several years consolidating their respective positions. Stalin created a Warsaw Pact empire in the nations it occupied in Eastern Europe, while the United States became fearful that the devastation and economic collapse that existed throughout Europe immediately after World War II could serve as a breeding ground for communism. American leaders saw the Great Depression bring fascism to Italy and Germany and could easily imagine how similar economic hardships could cause Western Europe to go red unless they did something about it.

Out of such worries sprang the Truman Doctrine, the Marshall Plan, and covert operations funding anticommunist political parties in Greece and Italy. George Kennan's containment policy laid out the rationale for these policies and explained their purpose - basically to consolidate the position of the United States and its "free world" allies in Western Europe and prevent the Soviet Union from spreading its empire.

The United States came out of the war from a position of great power over the Soviet Union. While the United States had the atomic bomb, it would take the Russians several years to develop one. Stalin tried to blockade Berlin from June 1948 to May 1949 in an attempt to starve out West Berlin and prevent the United States from revitalizing West Germany, but he failed. This defeat essentially marked the successful containment of the Soviet Union after which the Russians failed to expand their empire in any meaningful way. In fact, they had trouble holding on to what they had and eventually lost everything in 1989.

Although the United States successfully contained the Soviet Union in 1949, the Cold War went on for fifty more years and morphed from a Cold War in Europe designed to contain Soviet expansion into a global Cold War to manage the world. In 1949, the Soviet Union successfully exploded an atornic bomb - an act that changed the face of war forever. The fact that the two nations had atomic bombs made it so that conventional war between great powers was now obsolete. That meant the Cold War became a series of "limited" wars in places such as Korea, Vietnam, and Afghanistan, and an imperial "covert" war for control of various "third world" nations throughout the world.

©AntPDC Images from the first three generations of Star Trek. This melody is from one of my favourite episodes from Next Generation: "The Inner Light". I also loved the later episode "Lessons" which featured this tune in another rather moving context - Captain Picard on his Ressikan flute and Commander Nella Daren on roll-up piano.

It was later orchestrated for the 30th anniversary of Star Trek, and that is the work featured here. As an aside, I'm reminded of a similar melody: "The Skye Boat Song", better-known as "Over the sea to Skye" (old Scottish song).

In some of the Enterprise images I was influenced by Stanley Kubrick's balletic spacecraft sequences in his film "2001". I was stunned by what he did in the late 1960's in terms of imagery, and I remain so today, notwithstanding advances in technology.

I hope you enjoy, and please forgive my partial treatment of the Star Trek characters - just my take in the context of this music.

Chapter 6

The Assassinations of Robert Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King and Lyndon B. Johnson's Withdrawal in 1968

The Power Control Group faced several dangers in 1968. While President Johnson had cooperated fully with their desires in Viet Nam and in other parts of the world, he had not met their requirements in other areas. He had gone too far in appeasing the blacks and had shown some signs of giving in to the young people in America in early 1968. Through threats to expose his role in covering up the truth about the JFK assassination or personal threats to the safety of his family, the Group forced his withdrawal from the 1968 election race. Their plan now was to install Richard Nixon as president at all costs.

Robert Kennedy and Dr. King posed real threats to this plan. Dr. King was beginning a movement in the direction of a coalition with Malcom X followers and other black militant groups. He was speaking out against the Viet Nam war. His influence might help defeat Nixon at the polls. So the Power Control Group created an environment in which he could be assassinated by his arch enemies.

After Ray was identified and arrested in London, Hoover and the Justice Department had to manufacture some evidence to get Ray back to the U.S. They had no qualms about bribing one witness, Charlie Stevens, to do this. They forced him to say he had seen Ray. Then a new problem arose. Ray began telling the truth to his lawyer and a writer, William Bradford Huie. He almost 9/19/23, 11:04 AM Chapter 6, The Assassinations of Robert Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King and LyndoB. Johnson's Withdrawal in 1968, revealed Frenchy's true identity. The Power Control Group, led by J. Edgar Hoover, solved this problem by getting rid of Ray's lawyer, Arthur Hanes, and they hired Percy Foreman to keep Ray quiet. They also were forced to pay off or frighten off author Huie who had by then become convinced Ray was telling him the truth. Huie had found several witnesses who had seen Ray and Frenchy together.

The group got Foreman to talk Ray into pleading guilty and Huie to retract his conspiracy talk and publish an article and a book claiming Ray was the lone assassin. Ever since Ray was put away for 99 years, the FBI and the Power Control Group have been hard at work covering up the truth, bribing or influencing judges who have heard Ray's appeals for a trial, publishing disinformation like Gerold Franck's book, An American Assassin, suppressing evidence, and placing key witnesses in psychiatric wards. It is still going on. They have killed at least one reporter -- Louis Lomax -- who was getting too close to the truth. The local D.A., Phil Canale, was brought into the conspiracy along with Percy Foreman, Judge Battle, Fred Vinson (who extradited Ray, using Stevens' false affidavit), and local authorities who committed Grace Walden Stevens to a mental institution because she knew Charlie had been dead drunk and saw nothing.

The mechanics of the assassination are as follows: Youngblood and Frenchy recruited Ray in Montreal for smuggling drugs into the U.S. from Mexico and Canada. They recruited him in the assassination plan in such a way as to make him believe they were smuggling guns to Cuba.

Frenchy (Ray knew him as Raoul) set up Ray as a patsy by planting evidence with Ray's prints on it near the fake firing point. He persuaded Ray to rent a room opposite Dr. King's motel, to buy a rifle with telescopic sight, and a white Mustang, and park the Mustang outside the rooming house to wait for Frenchy to come out. Youngblood stationed himself on a grassy knoll beneath the rooming house where Frenchy was located. When King came out on his balcony, Youngblood killed him with one shot fired at an upward angle. Frenchy ran from his perch overlooking King's balcony. He made plenty of noise to attract attention, and dropped a bag full of items with Ray's prints on them in front of an amusement parlor next door to the rooming house.

Frenchy must have had some anxious moments then because Ray had driven the Mustang to a gas station a few blocks away to have a low tire pumped up. Three witnesses remember his being there. When Ray returned, not yet knowing what had happened, Frenchy told him to drive away toward the edge of town where Frenchy got out of the back seat. Ray drove on to Atlanta with the intention of meeting Frenchy there.

Meanwhile, Youngblood mingled with the crowd under King's balcony and then faded away. A false trail was created by another member of the team who drove away in a second white Mustang and then created a fake auto chase on the police band radio. Youngblood was tracked down by various reporters in early 1976 and began negotiating to tell his story for a very high price. Meanwhile, judge after judge and court after court keep turning down Bernard Fensterwald and James Cesar, Ray's new lawyers, who appealed for a new trial.

All of the information above has been reported with factual evidence backing it up in several articles, one book, and at Ray's legal hearing for a new trial in Memphis in 1975.[2] After Dr. King was eliminated, the Power Control Group faced a much greater threat. Robert Kennedy began his quest for the presidency. There was little doubt in the minds of anyone in the Group that Kennedy would be nominated as Democratic candidate at the convention, and would have a very good chance of defeating Richard Nixon. This would be a near certainty if Eugene McCarthy decided to drop out and support Senator Kennedy. Robert Kennedy represented a double threat to the Group in that he would undoubtedly expose them after becoming president and seize control.

The plan they adopted was again to create an environment in which it would be easy for an enemy like the Minutemen or the Mafia or certain local hate groups in California to assassinate RFK and get away with it by setting up another patsy. Available at the time was a CIA agent planted inside the Los Angeles police department. Strong influence was brought to bear on chief of police, Ed Davis, to remove all official protection for Senator Kennedy in the Ambassador Hotel.

Arrangements were made for the Ace Guard Service to supply three extreme right wing, militant guards at the hotel to guard the Senator after his victory speech. One of these was Thane Eugene Cesar, a known Kennedy hater and friend of a group of Southern California Minutemen. He was 9/19/23, 11:04 AM Chapter 6, The Assassinations of Robert Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King and Lyndon B. Johnson's Withdrawal in 1968, also almost certainly a CIA contract agent or "blind" assassin. At the same time another group was recruited to hypnotize Sirhan Sirhan and to program him for firing some shots in Robert Kennedy's direction.

Two hypnotists and at least three other people were involved in the framing of Sirhan. Cesar killed Robert Kennedy from behind while Sirhan was firing under hypnosis from in front of the Senator. His programmed signal was given by a girl in a polka dot dress and another young Arabic man with them in the pantry.

After the crime, the FBI, the CIA agent (Manny Pena), the District Attorney's office (Evelle Younger and Joseph Busch) and the Los Angeles Police Department (Ed Davis, Robert Houghton and others), knowing the truth, all teamed up to suppress all other evidence except that which was aimed at framing Sirhan. The Power Control Group has since wielded its influence to keep the RFK case under wraps. They pushed legislation through the California legislature to lock up the evidence. They put Thomas Noguchi, the L.A. County Coroner who wouldn't keep quiet about the autopsy evidence which proved conspiracy, in an insane asylum. They arranged for the FBI report on the assassination to be classified and locked up. They killed at least one person who knew what had happened. They controlled the media on the subject, especially the Los Angeles Times through its owner, Norman Chandler, and his friend Evelle Younger, who became California State Attorney General.

After Al Lowenstein, Jerry Brown, Paul Schrade, Vincent Bugliosi, Robert Vaughn, Tom Bradley and others began to try to expose the truth, the Group fought back by setting up their own expert ballistics panel and buying or frightening them into distorting the evidence proving there were two guns fired. The Group is certainly not through yet. More planted disinformation can be expected and more bribing of judges and expert witnesses. There may be more killings. Cesar's life and the lives of the two hypnotists won't be worth much if they ever start talking.

The assassination https://justiceforrfk.com/the-investigation.html

The assassination of Robert Kennedy seemed, at first blush, to leave little room for mystery. Everyone near Kennedy saw Sirhan Sirhan firing towards him. But for those watching closely, and for those who would later wonder if there was more to the story, there was abundant reason to look beyond first appearances.

Just after midnight on June 5th, 1968 at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, after Senator Kennedy had won the California Democratic primary and thanked his assembled supporters, assistant maitre d' Karl Uecker led him through a dimly lit kitchen pantry en route to a press conference. Thane Eugene Cesar, a security guard hired for the night, followed Kennedy closely behind, holding the senator's right elbow and appearing to guide him.

As Kennedy stopped at the edge of a steam table to shake hands with kitchen workers, a 24-year-old Palestinian Christian, Sirhan Sirhan (who had moved to the LA area as a child}, began firing at Kennedy from several feet in front of him. After two shots, Uecker grabbed Sirhan's arm and, with the help of others, pushed him down onto the steam table, pinning his gun hand. Though his hand was pinned down and pointed away from Kennedy, Sirhan continued firing wildly injuring five bystanders. According to the eyewitness testimony, Sirhan's gun always remained one and a half to five feet in front of the senator while the coroner's report determined Kennedy was hit three times from behind, with the fatal shot to the back of his head at point blank range of l to 3 inches. He died 26 hours later.[1]

autopsy indicates a second gunman

According to respected LA County Coroner Dr. Thomas Noguchi, who performed the official autopsy, the three bullets that entered Kennedy's body were fired from behind him at close range. The fatal shot, Noguchi concluded, was fired from approximately one to three inches behind Kennedy's right ear, penetrating his brain. Two other bullets entered his right armpit and a fourth went through the shoulder pad of his jacket.[2]

Paul Schrade, a United Auto Workers Union executive, walking behind Kennedy, was struck by a different bullet altogether. Witnesses saw Schrade fall before the senator did, suggesting Schrade was hit by the first shot from Sirhan's gun.[3] Noguchi later stated that he believed the fifth shot killed Kennedy. Since Uecker had grabbed Sirhan's firing hand after the second shot and, with help from others, pinned his arm to a table in front of Kennedy, Sirhan could not have fired the fifth and fatal shot from behind at point blank range.

In the 1970s, Schrade, along with actor Robert Vaughan and former Congressman, Allard Lowenstein, requested that the LAPD and California courts reopen the case. They were repeatedly denied. Now, at the age of 96, Schrade has long ago forgiven Sirhan for shooting him and has made it his life's work to seek parole for Sirhan and to reopen the case to determine RFK's actual killer. He is supported by attorney Denise Bohdan whose father, Fernando Faura, was a journalist at the Ambassador Hotel that night. Faura uncovered significant evidence indicating an accomplice with Sirhan who was never investigated by the authorities. In fact, witnesses to the accomplice were browbeaten by the LAPD investigator to change their accounts.

Reacting to the news of Cesar's death, Robert Kennedy's son, RFK Jr., revealed he "hod plans to meet Thane Eugene Cesar in the Philippines until he demanded $25,000 through his agent Don Moldea ... ," adding that "Compelling evidence suggests that Cesar murdered my father... Police hove never seriously investigated Cesar's role in my father's killing."9 bullet count proves multiple gunman

In addition to the three gunshots hitting Kennedy from behind and a fourth bullet that passed through his coat, five other people were shot and injured, totaling nine shots. Sirhan's .22 caliber gun only held eight bullets so another person would have had to be shooting as well. Within hours, FBI agent William Bailey found two additional bullets lodged in the pantry door frame, increasing the bullet count to 11.[4] Police and FBI photographs showing two more bullet holes in the pantry door divider and another hole in the jamb of a backstage door suggested four more shots may have been fired.[5] Additionally, two witnesses reported hearing at least 12 shots.

In 2005, an expert audio engineer, Philip Van Praag, laboriously examined a sound recording of the shooting and made several important discoveries. There were 13 "shot sounds," with two instances of "double shots" (shots fired so closely together, they could not have come from the same gun). He also determined that five of the shots were fired from the opposite direction of Sirhan's eight shots, indicating that they were fired from behind Kennedy.[6]

the suspicious security guard

As the shooting began, security guard Thane Eugene Cesar was standing behind and slightly to the right of Kennedy, in the exact firing position described by the autopsy. Several witnesses observed Cesar drawing his weapon and one witness saw him fire. He was interviewed within hours by the LAPD but they never checked his gun. Cesar claimed he was carrying a .38 caliber revolver that night but he also owned a .22 caliber revolver at the time. Cesar later lied saying he had sold the .22 four months prior to the assassination but the sales receipt proved he actually sold it three months afterwards. He also told the buyer it had been involved in a "police shooting."

Thane Eugene Cesar held extreme right-wing views, supported George Wallace for President and openly admitted hating the Kennedys. At that time, he was working at Lockheed, home of the U-2 spy plane, with a high-level security clearance from the Department of Defense. A week before the assassination, he took a part-time job working evenings as a security guard for Ace Guard Service. Kennedy was assassinated on Cesar's second assignment.

Given this incriminating information, Cesar remains a key suspect as a second gunman. Dan Moldea, the author of a book presenting Sirhan as a lone assassin, claims Cesar passed a polygraph test that proved his innocence.[7] However, Moldea has never been willing to release the results of that test, calling into question its existence and, if so, its actual results. Announcing Cesar's death in 2019 in the Philippines on Facebook, Moldea disclosed he was the godfather to Cesar's son, handled his media inquiries and held his Power of Attorney.[8]

Reacting to the news of Cesar's death, Robert Kennedy's son, RFK Jr., revealed he "had plans to meet Thane Eugene Cesar in the Philippines until he demanded $25,000 through his agent Dan Moldea ... ," adding that "Compelling evidence suggests that Cesar murdered my father ... Police have never seriously investigated Cesar's role in my father's killing."[9]

These sessions also produced new evidence of "range mode" programming possibly used to set up Sirhan as a distraction in the pantry, while a second gunman fired the fatal shot from an inch behind Kennedy's right ear. After Brown identified physical and verbal cues, on three occasions, Sirhan assumed a firing stance, entered "range mode" and fired at imagined targets, as Brown believes he did on the night of the assassination. Brown also believes Sirhan was conditioned to forget his actions and connections to others involved while in this dissociated state. He believes the girl in the polka dress, who was seen with Sirhan and later running away from the crime scene, gave Sirhan the cues to enter "range mode" and fire involuntarily at Kennedy, with no conscious intent to kill him.21

Authors David Talbot ("Brothers: The Hidden History of the Kennedy Years") and Lisa Pease ("A Lie Too Big to Foil") hove identified Howard Hughes' right-hand man, former FBI agent, and the CIA's Castro assassination plot coordinator, Robert Maheu, as the likely planner of Robert Kennedy's assassination. Multiple government documents prove that Maheu worked for the CIA in assassination plots and other covert activities in the 1960s. Maheu also admitted to Talbot that he hated the Kennedys.

Maheu's principal accuser is former top Howard Hughes executive and Maheu associate, John Meier. Meier knew that Thane Eugene Cesar was an employee of Maheu's private security firm that performed top secret activities for the CIA. Meier also described suspicious conversations he heard between Maheu and Donald Nixon, Richard Nixon's brother, shortly before and after the assassination and wrote about them in his diary (partially published in Gerald Bellett's "Age of Secrets"). Hughes had long been a major financial supporter of Richard Nixon and a close collaborator with the CIA. Meier, now 88, has continued to try to get his information about the case out to the public.

These sessions also produced new evidence of "range mode" programming possibly used to set up Sirhan as a distraction in the pantry, while a second gunman fired the fatal shot from an inch behind Kennedy's right ear. After Brown identified physical and verbal cues, on three occasions, Sirhan assumed a firing stance, entered "range mode" and fired at imagined targets, as Brown believes he did on the night of the assassination. He believes the girl in the polka dress, who was seen with Sirhan and later running away from the crime scene, gave Sirhan the cues to enter "range mode" and fire involuntarily at Kennedy, with no conscious intent to kill him.21

sirhan's alleged motive

Sirhan was arrested with a newspaper clipping in his pocket criticizing Kennedy's campaign pledge to sell jet bombers to Israel to replenish jets lost in the Arab-Israeli War the year before. A notebook found in his bedroom contained repetitions of the phrase "RFK must die ... RFK must be assassinated by June 5 '68," the first anniversary of the Arab-Israeli War.

At trial, the strange "automatic writing" in Sirhan's notebooks was cited as evidence of the cold, callous, premeditated nature of the crime but Sirhan claims he has no memory of writing in the notebooks nor of the shooting itself. And it hos never been explained how it was possible for Sirhan to have written the most incriminating page on Moy 18th, two days before Kennedy made his first campaign speech promising bombers to Israel. [11]

"sirhan's confession"

Supporters of the lone assassin story point to Sirhan's "confession" in which he stated "I killed Robert Kennedy willfully, premeditatively, with 20 years of malice aforethought." Sirhan's claim that he had been planning the RFK killing since the age of four was ridiculous and nobody in court took his outburst seriously.

The outburst came after days of pleading with the Judge to fire his attorney due to the dismal defense he was being provided. Yet, the "confession" has been taken out of context and used against him ever since.[12]

the cover-up

Sirhan's lead attorney Grant Cooper (who had the threat of an indictment hanging over him for lying about the source of stolen grand jury transcripts in another case} never raised any of the obvious discrepancies at trial. Cooper accepted that his client was guilty but mounted a defense of "diminished capacity" claiming he was in a dissociated state and not fully responsible for his actions. The jury did not accept that theory and Sirhan was convicted of murder and he has remained in prison ever since.[13]

There were serious concerns about LAPD criminalist DeWayne Wolfer's work on other cases and the L.A. District Attorney failed to conduct an independent evaluation of the firearms evidence, despite an offer from the L.A. Sheriff's Office to do so.[14] Wolfer mis-labelled and mis-represented the bullet and gun evidence to the Grand Jury at trial, such that at no time was the bullet recovered from Kennedy's neck ever matched to Sirhan's gun. The test bullets he presented were not from Sirhan's gun, but from a wholly different gun taken from an LAPD evidence locker. He also lied in a subsequent investigation in the 1970s to cover his tracks which became evident when the records of his daily logs and other LAPD and trial items became available in the 1980s.

The LAPD also destroyed crucial evidence including photos seized at the scene, door frames and ceiling panels with bullet holes and suppressed their files on the case for 20 years.[15]

Witnesses who gave accounts conflicting with the official story of Sirhan as a lone assassin were either given coercive polygraph examinations by LAPD Sergeant Enrique Hernandez or their testimony was ignored. In audiotapes of these sessions, Hernandez is heard browbeating witnesses into retracting their statements.[16]

Researchers later discovered that the two LAPD officers in charge of the investigation were connected with the CIA. The LAPD were working closely with the CIA on their Operation Chaos program in the late l960's using domestic surveillance, agent provocateurs and other tools to target anti-war and civil rights activists. The two men in day-to-day control of the LAPD investigation, Enrique Hernandez and Manuel Pena, had both trained police officers in South America for the CIA-connected Office of Public Safety.[17] Pena signed off on every report and decided which leads to follow and who to interview. According to FBI agent Roger La Jeunesse, Pena had performed assignments for the CIA for a decade.[18]
